Sounds of Christmas echoed through Sunset Center last Saturday afternoon as about 200 people gathered for the Christmas in Carmel program.

Mayor Barney Laiolo opened the program with a short welcoming speech and introduced the Rev. Jesse Vaughan, who gave the invocation.

Pay irks some city workers

By JOANNE HODGEN

UNHAPPINESS is growing among city employees.

The focus of complaints is a city salary schedule which many say gives them less than their counterparts in other Peninsula cities.

"People are grumbling because of the pay scale," said one department head who asked that his name be withheld.

Another city employee who also asked to remain anonymous said many workers have considered looking for other jobs. "I'm one of those who are looking," she said.

Though city employees were granted a 10 percent cost-ofliving raise for fiscal 1980-81, there was no merit increase.

CITY FINANCE Officer Jim Bajari said negotiations began in May with department heads and the City Employees Association.

No agreement has been reached.

The Safety Employees Association, which includes police and fire personnel, negotiated for an additional 10 percent benefit and salary increase for fiscal 1980-81.

One employee, who also asked that her name be withheld, said the raise granted police and firemen was deserved. "But why should the (city) Council consider safety employees for 10 percent raises and not consider other departments?" she Dissatisfaction among employees can be traced to 1975-76 when former City Administrator Hugh Bayless recommended to the council that it rule out increases for 17 employees — most of them in public works — who were labeled "over range." Those employees were not to receive further raises until their salaries came into "revised" salary ranges.

The Pine Cone said in September 1976 that a Bayless employee study reviewed and modified by city departments . . . "revealed that many employees were near or over what Bayless found to be comparable salary ranges in Peninsula cities."

In 1976, the council granted a three percent across-theboard raise to all employees except for salaries frozen at the recommendation of Bayless.

The city employees brought suit against the city charging the council failed to negotiate in good faith, seek further negotiations or appoint a mediator to reach a mutual agreement.

Grievances included reclassification of employees and freezing some employees' salaries until they fell within the new salary guidelines.

Complainants did not include the Police Department or department heads.

The Bayless study was partially based on a report by Dr. Melvin Steckler which cost the city $2,500. The economist recommended reorganization of city departments and streamlining operations.

One department said Bayless also employed "vindictiveness" when he recommended a monthly salary cut of more than $300 for another department head as well as personnel cuts.

HOWEVER, JACK COLLINS, who succeeded Bayless, renegotiated with the employees.

In 1978, a memorandum of understanding granted

Enforcement may be difficult

Transient rental ordinance due

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE BITE may be out of a proposed ordinance that would prohibit transient rentals in the residential district.

The Carmel City Council ordered city staff to draw up an ordinance making it illegal to rent homes in the residential district for 30 days or less when it met Monday, Dec. 8.

The vote was 4-1, with Councilman Howard Brunn opposed and Councilman Frank Lloyd abstaining (an abstention is counted as a "yes" vote under city law).

Enforcement of the new ordinance may be as difficult as it is under the existing zoning ordinance, Chief Building Inspector Ron Warren said during a break at the meeting. Only one yiolator has been successfully prosecuted, he said. Violation is a misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of a $500 fine or six months in jail or both.

Though transient rentals have been illegal in the residential district for many years, the existing ordinance banning them is not clear.

If the election were around the corner I know how you would vote.

As a result, enforcement and prosecution have been difficult.

THE DECISION on the ordinance came after nearly three years of haggling between the Carmel Planning Commission and council.

In 1978, it was brought to the council's attention that many homes were used on a transient basis in the residential district. A proposal rejected by the council in January 1979 would have clarified the existing ordinance and upheld a 30-day minimum occupancy requirement for single-family dwellings.

An ordinance recently approved by the Planning Commission and forwarded to the council for review Dec. 1 included a provision allowing transient occupancies of one week or more if the permanent occupant lived in the home for 270 days or more during a 12-month period.

Those homes would have been registered at City Hall by the owner or his agent. The transient occupant would register at the house.

ESTABLISHED 1915

Last week council members objected to the registration requirement, one member comparing it to Big Brother of George Orwell's book 1984.

The council last week instructed City Administrator Doug Peterson to prepare a report with alternate solutions to the transient problem for its meeting Dec. 8.

PETERSON PRESENTED six proposals to the council Monday that ranged from leaving the law as is to adopting the Planning Commission proposal.

A plan to pass the Planning Commission ordinance with no registration procedure and no exceptions was considered the most reasonable by the council. In a memo to the council, Peterson said that would "restate existing law in positive terms and give the city attorney more confidence in initiating prosecution."

However, the council agreed it would be difficult to enforce restrictions on transient rentals of one week or more.

Saying that no noticeable change will be incorporated into the new ordinance, Brunn asked how it would keep real estate agents from continuing to rent illegally on a short-term basis as they have done in the past.

Peterson said, "What I'm looking for from the council is a statement, 'Yes, it is illegal' so it can be prosecuted."

Peterson said the proposed ordinance would also make it illegal to advertise transient rentals. Owners, their agents and the publication that the ad appeared in would be held responsible, he said.

A PARADE OF RESIDENTS appeared before the council Monday, objecting to the use of homes for transient rentals.

Royal Adams of Carmel said the problem faced by the city is the "motel-like encroachment of transient rentals into our R-1 (residential) zoning.

"What does bother us is the blatant greed, the money merchants, the speculators, both out-of-town and local, who have caused this flagrant misuse of our residential community as evidenced by the advertisements under 'vacation rentals' in the Pine Cone and Herald," she said.

She asked that an ordinance be adopted making it illegal to rent for less than 30 days, with the exception of three shortterm rentals per year to accommodate visitors to community

Harold Lillard of Carmel noted that the illegal occupation of homes in Carmel is widespread. "Short-term rentals, multiple rentals and negligible enforcement of the existing ordinance is contributing to a gradual, but steady deterioration in neighborhood aesthetics and the quality of life in general in the Carmel residential area," he said.

Lillard said to consider short-term rentals without a residency requirement is a form of introducing business into the residential area of Carmel.

He observed that though some council members object to the registration requirement, the city "does regulate and largely control the lifestyle of this community now" through strict zoning and building codes.

FORMER PLANNING Commission member Dr. Francis Herrick said he supported the staff recommendation that would restrict temporary occupancies to 30 days or more.

Referring to the one-week term that would have been permitted with registration, he said, "I don't feel an ordinance should be drawn up in a punitive spirit that would make enforcement impossible."

He also noted that because motels are usually full in Carmel, it would put pressure on part-time residents to turn their homes into transient units.

Larry Morago of Carmel reiterated that the ordinance would be useless if it could not be enforced. He also noted short-term rentals could deprive the housing market of homes for year-round families in Carmel.

FORMER CITY COUNCILMAN Les Gross, representing the group "Old Carmel," said that in 1968 an ordinance prohibiting the expansion of existing motels in the residential district was adopted by voters.

"This proposed ordinance (the Planning Commission proposal) liberalizes the old ordinance by allowing some shortterm use," he said.

Referring to the council's apparent reluctance to adopt a strict ordinance, he said, "If the election were around the corner I know how you would vote. "It appears the voters perceived this ordinance as a good solution to the problem," he said. Brunn reminded the spectators, "I don't believe there's anybody at this table or in the room that's interested in proliferating motel use in the residential district." He again objected to using registration as a tool to control

Mayor Barney Laiolo stated, "I would not support an ordinance on the books that would look good but couldn't do anything about the problem. How do you enforce it?"

PETERSON TOLD THE COUNCIL that complaints from residents would be the main way a violation would come to the attention of the city.

Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson, in supporting the commission's ordinance, said the responsibility of enforcement must be shared by the community.

"As a council, there is no way the city can look to you to prevent transient occupancies in the residential district alone," he said. "You can't do it unless you have the support from the residential district itself."

Asked if enforcement would be easier under the Planning Commission ordinance, the building inspector said he now goes to the site of a transient rental when complaints are received.

However, he noted that the occupants are often schooled on city law. When asked if they are short-term renters, Warren said they often respond that they are relatives.

In supporting the registration requirement, Carmel resident Phillip Oberg said requiring property registration "doesn't seem to me to be an infringement of freedom. It's the property not the people who are being registered."

After the vote, Planning Commissioner Sandy Swain said she was satisfied with the decision of the council.

"We're telling the community it's illegal," she said.

Commissioner Davidson agreed. "I'm very happy with the decision of the council," he said.

The elimination of one-week tentals based on 270-day permanent occupancies was satisfactory to Davidson. The registration requirement was needed to regulate those rentals, he said.

"I was concerned they would adopt the ordinance as it was written without the registration requirement. The way it's written now they may be able to enforce it if it's violated," Davidson observed.

The ordinance will be presented to the council for review at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 5 at City Hall.

10 percent based on the annual rate of inflation. Employees want the salary schedule re-evaluated.

Bajari said employee negotiations now are for "raises over and above the cost-of-living factor."

He said a built-in factor for merit raises is included in the schedule. "There's a five-step scale. An employee can eventually work up to step five," Bajari said.

COUNCILWOMAN HELEN ARNOLD sympathizes with the city employees.

"They shouldn't be penalized for working in Carmel. Living is more expensive here than other Peninsula cities," she said. In the past, salary policies reflected the attitude that "working in Carmel was a privilege," she said. It is economically difficult for an employee to live and work in Carmel, according to Mrs. Arnold. "We're having to extend residency limits (for safety employees) wider and wider," she observed.

POLICE CHIEF William Ellis, who is in charge of negotiations for department heads, said he would meet soon with City Administrator Doug Peterson.

Ellis said he would ask for a re-evaluation of all employee positions "as far as wages and responsibilities are concerned." Other issues that may be discussed include the retirement system, he said. The department heads want to base pensions on the highest salary year rather than the average of the

"The present administrator said he would have a new salary schedule by now and what do you know — nothing, "she said.

LOIS JONES, who heads the City Employees Association. said, "We have been promised that the city administrator will do a salary study.

"It has been promised before and wasn't completed. Collins left before it was completed."

She said that once the study is compiled, she hopes it will reflect advances.

A SURVEY of Monterey and Pacific Grove salary schedules for department heads revealed they make more than those with similar positions in Carmel.

The Pacific Grove police chief, for example, earns $36,696 annually; the Carmel chief gets $32,580.

The Carmel fire chief earns $30,125; the Pacific Grove chief gets $34,956. Because the city salary schedule for 1980-81 has not been approved by City Administrator Peterson, a copy was not available for the Pine Cone. However, a copy of the fiscal 1980-81 personnel budgets shows that salaries for secretaries and clerk-stenographers earn $12,108 to $14,712 annually. The general secretary to the police, fire and library in Monterey earns $12,408 to $15,072. In Carmel, similar

In Monterey, the pay scale ranges from $14,712 to $17,880. The entry-level position in streets and parks in Monterey receives $13,020 to $15,828; in Carmel, that job gets $13,555.

CV Master Plan environmental report sought

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE CARMEL CITY Council has earmarked a maximum of $2,000 for legal fees for a review of the draft Environmental Impact Report on the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The council approved it 4-1, Mayor Barney Laiolo opposed, with the condition that lawyer Zan Henson come back to the council with a progress report to the city if more money is needed. The action was taken Monday, Dec. 8.

At its meeting Dec. 1, the council asked City Attorney George Brehmer to estimate legal fees for the review. Brehmer stated then that Henson, who worked on the lawsuit against the county, wanted to ensure that the county adequately prepare the EIR.

The City of Carmel filed a lawsuit against the county in February. It was prompted by the county Board of Supervisors' approval of the Master Plan on Jan. 15. The Master Plan calls for building a maximum of 2,500 new units in Carmel Valley in the next 20 years.

The lawsuit asked the county to prepare an EIR for the Master Plan.

Brehmer said Dec. 8 that he estimates it will take 20 to 40 hours to review the draft at the rate of $65 an hour.

Councilman Howard Brunn proposed that a $2,000 ceiling be placed on the project.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said, "I think the earlier we get involved (in the review process) the better off Carmel will

■ Volunteers who turn out Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 13 and 14, to help clear Carmel River of trees will be rewarded with free firewood, according to Darby Worth of the Carmel River Watch (CREW).

She asked the council to support the project.

Councilman Howard Brunn proposed that the city donate equipment.

City Administrator Doug Peterson explained that city personnel would be required to operate equipment. He noted he was "somewhat worried about legal problems."

The council asked Peterson to investigate the city donating equipment for the weekend project.

■ The council voted 5-0 to reinstitute a traffic committee that would consider traffic matters now handled by the Planning Commission.

A proposal to form a committee composed of the police chief, fire chief, public works director, city engineer, two planners and a resident was adopted. The committee would report directly to the City Council.

A Planning Commission traffic subcommittee must now report to the commissioners before recommendations are forwarded to the council.

Planning Director Bob Griggs described it as a "cumbersome administrative process. Regardless of all the recommendations that come forth, I've seen you bite the bullet one way or another.

"I think you should shorten the process and save staff

Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson agreed. "As a member of the Planning Commission, take it off our backs," he said.

Mayor Barney Laiolo said he talked with members of the former traffic committee and "I guess they got fed up with it . . . " He suggested a small committee be formed.

■ The council voted 5-0 to appoint Mrs. Arnold the city representative to the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project.

The organization is supported by local cities, county, state and federal governments. It focuses on the drug problems of

■ The second reading of an ordinance that modifies the requirement for building heights and sideyard setbacks in the residential district was passed 5-0. The ordinance, which goes into effect in 30 days from final adoption, will close a loophole that permits homes to be built to a greater height than the city intended when the code was written.

The ordinance was reworded to state that "no building shall exceed 24 feet in height measured from the existing grade and adjacent to the exterior walls of the building at any point of measurement . . . "

■ The council adopted an ordinance 5-0 that would clarify requirements for use permits and variances.

■ The council approved landscaping completed in front of Adams Eden of Flavor on the north side of Fifth Street between Mission and Junipero owned by Royal Adams.

Plantings were done beside the walkway between the public right-of-way without city permission.

The council voted 4-0 to approve the encroachment. Councilman Mike Brown was absent.

■ The council voted 5-0 to appoint the city administrator to the technical committee of AMBAG, the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments.

Brunn will serve on the policy committee.

First: Get your money's worth of good wood

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE BARK on wood produces more heat than the

A cord of oak weighs too much to haul in an average-size pickup.

And depending on which firewood expert you talk to, eucalyptus is either the best buy in firewood or the dirtiest burning.

Residents stoking their fireplaces or iron stoves this winter can expect to pay about $100 to $150 a cord for firewood, according to local suppliers and tree trimmers.

Split logs and wood scraps can also be bought from unlicensed private individuals, although the buyer should be wary of undersized cords and unseasoned wood.

FIREWOOD CAN BE OBTAINED free from Los Padres National Forest; cuts are scheduled periodically and all that is required besides a chainsaw, a vehicle and sweat is a permit from the U.S. Forest Service office in King City.

As a last resort, persons seeking firewood can scrounge from the refuse pile at construction sites, although it should not be done unless permission is granted from the builder.

One resident reported also that wood he took from a construction site did not burn well; the wood turned out to be green, which is unusual since green wood is not supposed to be used in building. But that is just one of the factors to consider in firewood hunting.

The most important factor in choosing and buying the right firewood is knowing how much a cord of it weighs, according to Robert Zobel, owner of Hacienda Hay and Feed, a major supplier of firewood in Carmel Valley.

The heavier the wood, the more heat it produces, Zobel noted.

While a cord of pine weighs about 2,700 pounds, he said a Continued on next page

Second: You thought fireplaces were easy?

By JOANNE HODGEN

ONLY A FEW YEARS ago a fireplace was considered a romantic necessity for every home.

was concerned that heat could actually be lost through the chimney. Energy was plentiful and inexpensive. But no longer. Instead of heat, fireplaces can generate higher utility bills unless properly maintained.

Heat comes from flames, hot coals and the surface at the A cracking fire left ambience on a special evening. No one back of the fireplace. However, "a large amount of heated room air is drawn up the chimney and vented to the outdoors," according to the book 350 Ways to Save Energy. Only 10 to 15 percent of the warmth generated in an ordinary fireplace ever reaches the room it is in, the book stated.

Third: If crud clogs chimney, clean quickly

By JOANNE HODGEN

IF AN UNUSUALLY DRESSED stranger with an interest in chimneys is spotted on a nearby rooftop don't confuse him with Santa Claus.

It's probably chimney sweep Michael Johnson nattily dressed in top hat and tails.

The 30-year-old sextant at All Saints' Church in Carmel and part-time chimney sweep has scaled peaked Victorian rooftops in the pursuit of clean chimneys. He estimated that more than 500 chimneys have felt the bristles of his steel brush since he began cleaning them three years ago.

Most of those chimneys were in Carmel and Carmel Valley. he said, the hub of chimney cleaning on the Monterey Peninsula.

One-to-three-story homes as well as inns and mansions have been scaled by Johnson.

"Victorians are the worst," he lamented. "They have steeppitched roofs."

When he is pressed to find a toehold, Johnson said he cleans the chimney from the bottom up.

It is a dirty job that most fireplace owners would rather see someone else do. And, Johnson said, since the energy crunch business has been booming. "People are more conscious of energy. They want to start using fireplaces more and keep them in good order," he said. Carmel has many old fireplaces, Johnson said, "many of which have never been cleaned."

A MASONRY FIREPLACE that is used regularly should be cleaned every two years, he said.

But the time-span often depends on the type of wood burned.

He suggested that a chimney be cleaned after two cords of pine are burned or 3½ to four cords of oak. Johnson warned against burning trash, especially milk cartons and stacks of newspapers. If there is a spark arrester on the top of the chimney it can become clogged instantly by burning paper, he said.

He also noted that pressed logs will cause creosote (soot) build up in the chimney flue because of their high paraffin content.

Once the damage is done, how does a chimney sweep tidy up dirty flues, fireboxes and smoke chambers (the area behind the damper).

Johnson said he has never had to shimmy down a chimney. All the work is done from within the house or on top of the

A powerful vacuum is inserted into the firebox and a tarp placed around it to prevent soot or dust from escaping into the home. He then climbs up to the chimney. Johnson said he takes a steel brush the same diameter as the flue, adds an extension rod and scrubs. After thoroughly cleaning the flue, Johnson said he goes back down and removes the tarp and brushes out the firebox and smoke chamber.

ONCE THE FIREPLACE is clean, Johnson recommends leaving a two-inch bed of ashes.

"That makes it easier to start a fire, gives better heat dispersion and saves bricks at the bottom of the fireplace," he

HE SAID it takes 60 to 90 minutes to clean a fireplace. Flat rate for a one-story house is $40, while a two-story house is $60 to $75. The price goes up from there, he said. But Johnson earns his keep.

He once scrambled to the top of a three-story house in Carmel Highlands and climbed over three rooftops to reach the chimney.

"The chimney went another 15 feet in the air. Then I had to remove two turbines and balance them on top of the chimney while I cleaned it," he recalled.

Another time Johnson was climbing up a ladder to reach a roof of a Victorian home when it slipped out from under him. "I hung from the peak of the roof," he said, "but I survived." And, when the city hired him to clean the five chimneys at the Flanders mansion, Johnson said the Carmel Public Works Department lifted him to the rooftop with its tree-trimming equipment.

Johnson admitted he used to have a fear of heights.

"The job cured it," he quipped.

LYLE HITCHCOCK, office manager of The Fireplace Shop in the Mid-Valley Shopping Center, said a damper which closes off the flue cannot be shut until the embers are cool. An open flue, he said, is the equivalent of an open window.

If fireplace owners do not want their money to fly out the window along with their heat, there are preventive measures they can take, Hitchcock said.

Tubulator grates, blowers, fireplace liners and even glass doors can increase the heat output or prevent warm air from being sucked up the chimney, he said.

Tubulator grates (also known as convection grates) are C-shaped metal tubes that can replace a regular grate. When there is a fire, the air in the tubes, Hitchcock said, is heated and expands, then flows into the room.

Air from the room is drawn into the bottom of the tubes and is heated as it travels around the pipe.

According to the book How to Cut Your Energy Costs (U.S. News and World Report), tubulator grates can double or triple heat from a fireplace.

An electric blower can be added to the bottom of the grate to blow heat into the room. A blower can again double the heat output, according to U.S. News and World Report.

As the embers cool, the problem of heat loss is again encountered unless tempered glass doors are placed in front of the fireplace. "Glass doors don't increase heat, but they help stop heat loss," Hitchcock said.

Another way to increase heat output is to use a fireplace liner or insert, a free-standing, heavy-gauge steel liner that looks like a cast-iron stove, he said. Part of the insert is in the fireplace and part on the hearth.

The liner functions like a tubulator, drawing air in the bottom, heating it and then releasing it through the top.

According to a pamphlet published by a fireplace company, a fireplace with an insert will burn less than 10 pounds of wood an hour, generating 42,000 BTUs. The damper, the pamphlet said, is partially closed to prevent heated air from escaping up the chimney. An insert burns up to 66 percent less wood than an ordinary fireplace, the pamphlet said.

BUT HEAT-INCREASING UNITS can do little good unless the fireplace is cared for.

Soot build-up in the chimney can cause smoking or, ultimately, a flue fire.

To prevent dangerous soot buildup, only wood should be burned in the fireplace.

Hitchcock said trash should not be burned.

He recommended using a minimum amount of paper to

A chemical additive, he said, can be sprinkled on a fire to prevent soot from forming.

Wood to burn

cord of oak weighs 4,000 to 4,200 pounds and a cord of eucalyptus 4,500 to 5,000 pounds.

"It's obvious," Zobel warned, "that a cord of oak or eucalyptus is too heavy to haul in a pickup. You have to be leery of people delivering firewood in a pickup. Make sure you're getting a full cord."

A 3/4-ton pickup, for example, is large enough to contain a cord of firewood, which is 128 cubic feet. But, as Zobel noted, a cord of pine weighing 2,700 pounds is the absolute maximum weight the truck can handle. A cord of oak would be more than twice the allowable load.

Eucalyptus is the best choice for most homes, Zobel insisted, while he called it a "highly misunderstood syndrome that oak is the best."

Eucalyptus weighs more than oak and therefore contains more heat potential, Zobel said. It also costs less than oak, and contrary to another myth, Zobel insisted, eucalyptus does not gum up the chimney.

"Pine puts out the most creosote," he said, creosote being that flaky black gunk that clings like dandruff to the inside of stovepipes and chimneys, requiring more frequent calls to ye olde chimney sweep.

HE PRICE for firewood at Hacienda Hay and Feed last week was $112 per cord for pine, $140 per cord for eucalyptus and $150 for oak.

Prices were lower at Bindel and Sons Tree Service in Pacific Grove. Owner William Bindel said he was selling pine at $90 to $110 a cord, and oak and eucalyptus at $100 to $120 a cord.

Bindel agreed with Zobel that eucalyptus is not the dirtiest burning firewood. He said pine leaves a lot more residue than any of the other woods.

While Zobel said firewood sales have been increasing in Carmel Valley, Bindel said the trend for him has been the reverse, with more people cutting their own wood. Bindel also attributed his declining firewood sales to less building during the last three to four years, which has curtailed the demand for lot clearing.

Asked which firewood is the best overall, Bindel said it was a tossup between oak and eucalyptus.

EUCALYPTUS MAY not, however, be as ideal as Zobel indicated.

According to Ron Zeise, chief of the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department, eucalyptus is not clean burning.

"I don't know much about firewood, but the one thing I do know is that eucalyptus gives off more soot and your fireplace has to be cleaned more often," the fire chief said.

Before making the final choice on firewood, Zobel said the burner must consider what he is burning it in.

"If he's burning it where the efficiency is low, like in a fireplace," he said, "then pine is best."

The seasoning of the wood is also important. Zobel noted that while many people want their firewood to be bone dry or more than a year old, he said oak dried four to five months is adequate, and for eucalyptus, at least six months. If the wood is not seasoned long enough, he said, it will pop, crackle and not burn as well.

REDWOOD is not good for firewood, he added, because whether it is green or not it pops a lot, throwing coals out onto more heat because it contains more resins, Zobel said. He noted that pine and madrone make the best kindling.

HOW DOES FIREWOOD match up to natural gas or electricity for heating potential?

A cord of well-seasoned hardwood, oak or eucalyptus, burned in an enclosed stove with 55 to 65 percent efficiency produces heat equal to 175 gallons of oil or 225 therms of natural gas, Zobel said, quoting from a firewood study from the University of California Extension.

The study also concluded that a homeowner would pay less than half as much for hardwood to get the same heat as from electricity priced at nine cents per kilowatt-hour.

Compared to natural gas, however, a cord of wood costs more and produces less heat.

According to Pacific Gas and Electric Co., 90 to 110 therms per month of natural gas are needed to heat the average Carmel Valley home with the thermostat set at 68 degrees and the heat shut off at night. Cost for the space heating in the home under lower winter rates would be about $35 per month.

A cord of hardwood, while its heat-producing potential is equivalent to 225 therms of natural gas, or twice the amount needed for the home each month, costs at least three times more than natural gas.

Here's a few places to pick up free firewood

NO ONE NEED go out on a limb for free firewood.

Driftwood along Carmel beach or near the Carmel River mouth can be hauled off free of charge, according to Lois Jones of the Carmel Public Works Department.

She said wood from trees that the department cuts down is usually picked up by neighbors before it can be hauled away. Any wood that is left over is given to Harrison Memorial Library and Forest Theater for their fireplaces, she said.

However, downed trees and limbs on city property are free to residents, she said.

Mrs. Jones emphasized that it is illegal to cut down trees on city or private property without a permit.

Free firewood available to Carmel River volunteers

FREE FIREWOOD will be available to volunteers who help with a major project to clear fallen trees from the Carmel River.

The Carmel River Watch (CREW) and California Conservation Corps are sponsoring the project Dec. 13 and 14 to remove the trees that cause sandbars, dangerous snags and erosion problems.

The work will be coordinated from the parking lot of Carmelo Elementary School on Carmel Valley Road beginning at 9 a.m. both days.

Darby Worth, representative of CREW, said the Conservation Corps will cut the logs into six- to eight-foot lengths. She said CREW members and volunteers will then cut the wood into smaller pieces for fireplace use

Volunteers who help with the work will receive free firewood, while CREW intends to sell its share of the wood and use the money from the sales to produce a brochure on river care for residents, Mrs. Worth said.

"This is an all-out community effort," she said. The Carmel Unified School District was announcing the project in its schools, churches in the Valley were being contacted, the fire departments had offered support and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association was being asked to notify people through its phone tree, she said,

Students from the Naval Post Graduate School had offered to provide short-wave radio communications to help coordinate the work, she added.

The crews will be working to clear nine areas in the river.

Woods School pupils have a hand in saving tree

By JOANNE HODGEN

A PERSISTENT Carmel resident and a petition signed by 41 Carmel Woods School pupils have persuaded the Carmel City Council to consider an alternative to cutting down a pine tree to widen the intersection of Santa Fe and Third.

The council met at the intersection during its inspection tour meeting Monday, Dec. 8, to consider widening the road, a primary access into Carmel for commercial vehicles.

A path for pedestrians is atop a wall on the north side of the City Administrator Doug Peterson told the council the city's main concern is the "tight squeeze" when vehicles round the

Removing the tree on the south side of the road, he said, would provide a broader turning radius for vehicles.

JOHN ATHERTON, who lives at San Carlos and 10th, said, "I don't want to see the tree go."

Atherton said he spent 19 hours at the intersection interviewing neighbors and pedestrians. The consensus, he said, was to remove the wall, make a bank of asphalt and build the path on city property on the south side of the street. According to Atherton, everyone agreed that the "wall is the problem."

KATHY BAKER, 10, who helped circulate the petition at Woods School, told the Pine Cone, "All the kids agree we should save the tree somehow, some way."

Bill Askew, superintendent of Public Works, reiterated the staff recommendation to widen the street by removing the tree.

He said there was a recent problem at a similar intersection where the property owners permitted the city to build a path and wall on their property. When the owners decided to build on that section, the city was forced to revamp the intersection.

However, the council agreed to ask the property owners for permission to widen the road at Santa Fe and Third.

In other council action:

• A Carmel Fire Department fire engine set the stage when the council voted 5-0 to eliminate two parking spaces on the east side of Monte Verde between Fourth and Fifth.

In a memo to the council, City Administrator Doug Peterson said the road is the main emergency vehicle access to property in the northwest part of the city.

The fire truck was driven along Monte Verde to demonstrate that parking along the street impeded emergency vehicles.

Fire Chief Bob Updide noted that the truck must pull to the side and wait when a car is moving along the road.

Bob Jones, who lives on Monte Verde between Fourth and Fifth, protested the elimination of any parking places from

"I have no garage and no possibility of one. Any space you take is going to send me two or three blocks away," he said. He noted that a parking ordinance that reduced parking for workers in Carmel has aggravated the problem. He said employees move further into the residential zone when parking is taken from them.

• The council approved a request by Paul Laub to replace an existing door with a glass door across the front of his store

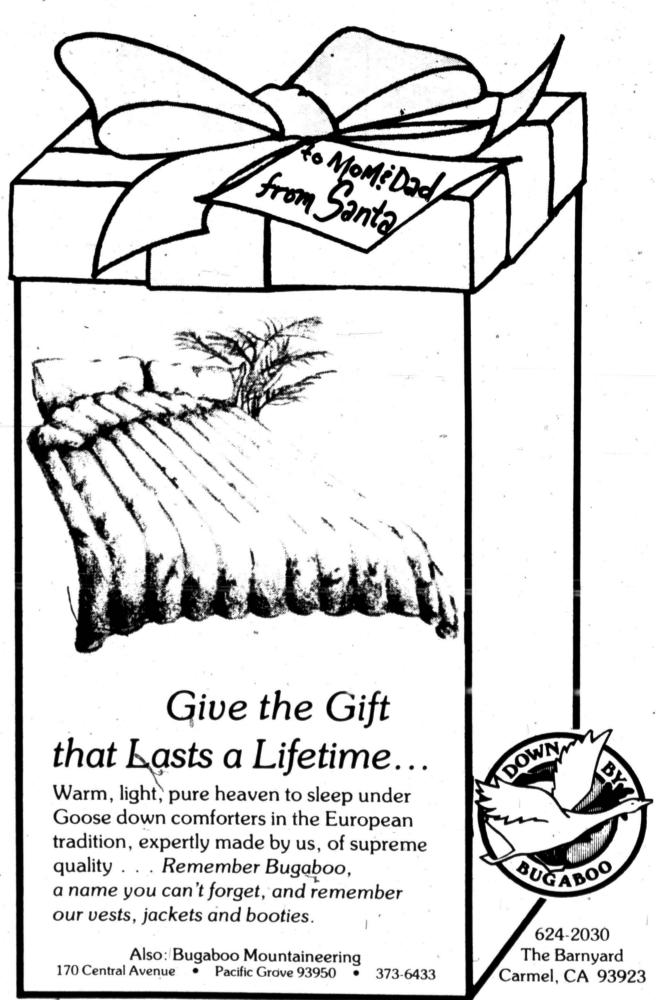

The building, the former site of David's gift shop, has been designated "significant" by the city. A permit must be issued for such buildings before any exterior changes are made. The Carmel Planning Commission previously recommended approval.

• The council voted 5-0 to deny a request to level an area for parking by removing soil at the home of Anita Hamm at Santa Lucia and San Antonio.

The home is in the unincorporated Carmel area, while the proposed parking is along Santa Lucia within city limits.

presented a program of Christmas music from many lands, including carols from Japan, Germany, France, Spain, Italy and Poland.

Ann Welchner led the singing and soon had the audience participating in a sing-along of such Christmas classics as Jingle Bells and Deck the Hall.

One favorite carol, Silent Night, which was written in Austria, was sung in German by Ann-Welchner and Jean Canada.

The choir, under the direction of Robert Klevan, sang special arrangements of many carols, including The Carols of the Bells, a Ukrainian Christmas carol.

Members of the choir also sang solos, including Lullaby Sweet Jesus, a Polish carol sung by Laura Kafka, and Mary's Little Boy Child, sung by Carl Uppman.

DEE OLIVETTI, the winner of this year's Christmas carol song-writing contest, was introduced to the audience, and her song, The Lonely Christmas Tree, was sung by the choir.

forgotten Christmas tree finding each other on Christmas Eve, drew loud and long applause. Mrs. Olivetti gave a short speech thanking the cultural committee for choosing her song.

The program ended with carols by the Childrens' Choir of the Church of the Wayfarer, under the direction of Janet Henshaw.

While the children were still on stage, Santa Claus arrived, joined the children and passed out candy canes. He later joined the guests on the patio for cookies and hot apple cider and chided many of them for not writing him letters this year.

Mrs. Peter Wright and Mrs. Roger Fremier were in charge of refreshments. Women from Carmel who helped with the serving included Elinor Laiolo, Charlotte Hurst, Harriet Shanner, Dorrie Hammond, Peggy Mailliard and Mike Pruit. Lorina Shields was in charge of table decorations.

Kimberly Dickerhoff, 2, of Carmel was dressed up for the Christmas program, but had a little trouble with her socks.

Edwina Bain Offers Private Harp Instruction in Carmei

Edwina Bain, a faculty member of the Monterey Peninsula Community School of Music, will offer private harp instruction to all interested students at her studio in Carmel.

Ms. Bain was educated at College of William and Mary and began studying harp at Mount St. Mary's Academy in Kenmore, New York.

This was followed by receipt of private harp instruction at Benedictine School for Girls in Richmond, Va.

Recent performance experience includes employment as a harpist with Reno Philharmonic Orchestra, Nevada Opera Orchestra, Tahoe Choir and Piper's

Opera House Summer Series.

She has also performed in a series of programs in Washington, D.C. sponsored by Virtuosi String players.

A collection of her transcripts for Troubador harp has been compiled that may be used by "New Harpists" at receptions, weddings and parties.

The harpist was also an instructor in a private studio in Reno, Nevada before establishing the Edwina Bain Harp Studio in Carmel this year.

A current student of Ms. Bain, Lori Eitoku, performed a harp solo by Maurice Ravel in the Salinas Junior Miss Pageant and won fourth runner-up in the contest.

Holiday time is when Carmel people help people

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

PARIS IS TELLING US that the really "in" style this season is a designer blouse worn with a pair of scruffy jeans.

Well, add a warm jacket and a pair of kick-about shoes and spend the day "bazaar hopping." You may be delighted with the unique Christmas presents you'll come home with.

As for the social scene \rightarrow it's gathering momentum and the big thing this week is tree-decorating parties. Everyone brings an ornament for the tree and, once the magic is accomplished, you gather 'round the fire, roast chestnuts (or settle for popcorn) and bring out the best bubbly — and you have all the makings of warm friendship and good cheer.

PEOPLE WHO NEED PEOPLE

And that's what it's all about every Thanksgiving when Ernie Benetti opens his Carmel Point home to all his friends (and their friends) who have no families of their own to celebrate with.

This year's event will long be remembered by the more than 100 people who dropped by to share holiday cheer of champagne and Italian wine and munch on Ernie's Italian cooking.

Ernie spent two full days in the kitchen preparing such good things as two 25-pound turkeys stuffed with Italian sausage, dressing, Italian faguzza (pizza) and more than 500 ravioli.

Barbara Martin found herself in the kitchen helping out, as did Ernie's two sons, Tim and David, who are visiting from San Francisco.

Ernie is a bartender at Toots Lagoon, so naturally boss man Eddie Johnson was in on the fun as was Nora Brice, better known as the "Duchess of Dolores Street."

Others enjoying Ernie's hospitality included John Ables and his son, Chad; Penny and Forrest Clark Adams; John Pascale, Ernie's landlord, and his wife; Jim and Jill Hermones of Long Beach; Marlene Michael, Charlie Nelson and Melanie Alvernez.

Ernie, who has already finished his Christmas shopping, is now preparing for his Christmas bash which will be a treedecorating party.

"All you have to do is bring an ornament for the tree and a friend," said Ernie, who promised to do all the cooking — Italian style, of course.

NEITHER RAIN...

Carmelites were treated to a show by Mother Nature last Wednesday.

The wind howled and tree branches dipped to the ground as the rain arrived in abundance — but the show must go on—

Hundreds of people, many dressed in holiday finery, braved the storm to attend the champagne-gala opening of the 12th annual Festival of Trees at the county fairgrounds exhibition hall. The affair was sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, and according to those present, it gets better every year.

Champagne and fruit punch bars were set up at each end of the hall and a huge buffet table offered a wide variety of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres including salmon on bagles, bite-size quiche, Italian meatballs, stuffed mushrooms, meat pies,

Thirty trees had been purchased by various businesses and individuals on the Peninsula and each was beautifully decorated in a unique theme. The trees are ordered early in the spring, then designed and executed by members of the Festival Workshop. An estimated 40,000 hours are given from February through November — preparing decorations for the trees. After the festival, the trees are wrapped and delivered to their owners, where they are displayed through the holidays.

Eunice Gray, looking lovely in a black chiffon blouse, long red skirt and gorgeous full-length, black and white mink coat, was there with her favorite fellow, Phil. The couple arrived with long-time friends, Dr. and Mrs. John J. D'Attilio, and along with Max Picard admired the tree which D'Attilio had ordered for his office - beautifully decorated in colorful flowers and horse-drawn carriages.

Mrs. C. Todd Singleton was there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Len, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Oliver, Marvin Weiner, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Root, Mr. and Mrs. George Dietierlie, Mrs. C. Mark Thomas, Mrs. Ruth Fenton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crispo, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Weingarten and hundreds of others.

Along with admiring the trees, guests browsed through the various bazaars which were set up around the hall — gourmet holiday food and kitchen items, hand-made ornaments, toys, jewelry, cards and cookbooks.

An evening to remember — in spite of the rain!

YOSEMITE SNOW (ALMOST)

Congratulations to JoAnn Fehring and Mark Holbrook who were married at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula in Carmel Valley Nov. 22.

Both Mark and JoAnn grew up in Carmel and were graduated from Carmel High School. JoAnn teaches at Bay School down the coast and also works for Howard Timbers at The Carmel Press. Mark is a builder.

The couple went to Yosemite for a honeymoon and planned to do some cross-country skiing, but according to JoAnn, the

"There was a full moon and the foothills were beautiful with fall colors so we gave up on the skiing and did a lot of hiking," said JoAnn. "We played tourist and did a lot of browsing and window-shopping."

They also went to a family reunion at the Yuba City home of JoAnn's sister and her husband, Jean and Richard Oakley, and then on to Chico where they visited with good friends Jan and Russ Burnham, who couldn't make it to the wedding.

JoAnn's parents are Ted and Marie Fehring of Carmel, and Mark's parents are Kenneth and Bonnie Holbrook of Renton.

Welcome home, honeymooners!

KETCH AS KETCH CAN

Charlotte Hurst, a native Carmelite who has lived in the same house since the 1930s, recently returned home after a month-long cruise on the high seas.

Actually, Charlotte helped crew a 35-foot Dickerson ketch, the Mehitabel, down the inner coastal waterways - beginning at Chesapeake Bay and deserting the ship at Jacksonville, Fla.

Charlotte, who is part owner of a 26-foot sloop — and loves to sail — was invited to take part in the exciting adventure by her long-time friends, Al and Judy Pride, owners of the ketch. Completing the crew were Jerry van Vleet and the Prides' two pooches, Mignon and Whiz, who, according to Charlotte, ran the boat and also had to be dinghied ashore at least twice a

Following the "snowbirds," the travelers visited the Eastern Shore of Chesapeake Bay and then sailed south.

"It's the first time I've ever missed my meeting of the Carmel Sanitary District," said Charlotte, who just became the first woman to head its board. "I arrived home on Nov. 12 and at the Nov. 20th meeting they elected me president."

Traveling down the "ditch," as the waterway is frequently called, was a bird-watchers' paradise, said Charlotte. "It was also like taking a trip through history," she said. "We saw historic old churches, maritime museums and shipyards - and the architecture of the old homes was extremely exciting."

Charlotte said that much of the trip gives one a sense of isolation. "The animals, bird life and vegetation were beautiful," she said, "and once in a while we saw a shrimp fisherman or an oyster dredger."

And just above Charleston, S.C., the explorers went through cypress swamps and acres and acres of what used to be the U.S. "rice bowl."

Charlotte said she was surprised at the number of senior citizens headed down the waterway on their way to the Florida Keys or the Bahamas. "You meet up with the other boats in the various ports and the women exchange information on such things as shopping while the men discuss engine problems," she said.

Although their engine broke down a couple of times inrough waters, Al and Jerry had no problem patching it up, according to Charlotte - who also said that Jerry was great with the anchor!

The fearless crew managed about 60 miles each day, usually docking about 3 p.m. so a gourmet meal with wine could be

Much to her regret, Charlotte left the cruise at Jacksonville and spent the next 14 hours riding the bus back to Washington, D.C., where she checked her gear and spent the day at the Smithsonian Institute before catching a plane back to Oakland.

An interesting side note to Charlotte's saga is that another Carmelite, writer John Keefauver, will be flying to College Park, Md., for his parents' 60th wedding anniversary celebration — and John is hoping to meet up with the Prides (who will be returning to Maryland for the Christmas holiday) and join their search-for-the-sun cruise. John, also a long-time friend of the Prides, joined them in a sail to the Bahamas a few years back.

Welcome home, Charlotte!

"EAST OF EDEN"

Special treat for Steinbeck admirers will be a 30-minute station-produced TV special On Location: East of Eden, which will air on KMST-TV channel 46, on Sunday, Dec. 14, Kathryn Pratt, the program's narrator and producer, said there is no attempt made to "tell the Eden story" as written by Steinbeck, but through the interviews with many of the stars and production people, the underlying elements of the novel's conflicts unfold.

When Steinbeck was writing East of Eden he kept a journal, and it is from that journal that Kathryn has taken the author's thoughts and matched them with scenes as portrayed by the actors, on-location, in the mini-series.

Local actors who will appear in the mini-series are Timothy and Sam Bottoms. Sam's first movie was The Last Picture Show, and his most recent was with Clint Eastwood in Bronco Billy. He is most noted for his part in Apocalypse Now. Brother Tim did Paper Chase.

Also of interest is the fact that many of the extras who played in the 1950s feature film East of Eden are appearing again in the mini-series.

Candy cane maker needs a strong arm

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

THE ONLY THING missing is the red and white Santa suit.

Even so, a visit to the back room of the Hansel and Gretel Candy Shop in Carmel is like walking into Santa's workshop.

Scents of peppermint, wintergreen and cinnamon fill the air as Pete Robotti sits in front of the back warmer, pulling, turning and twisting a huge block of candy mixture on the table in front of him.

Robotti looks a lot like Santa. He admits to nipping at the candy too much and his white hair, big smile and jovial laugh reveal a man who loves his work.

"The candy has to be just the right consistency to work with," said Robotti, as he turned the huge block and pulled just enough for a candy cane — snipped it from the block and quickly shaped it before passing it on to his son, Brian, who finished the work of wrapping and decorating with a big red Robotti explained that the process begins with mixing ingredients - sugar, flavors and water. "The batch looks like honey when it's first cooked," he explained. "When the cooking is complete, I pour it on the table and separate a few pounds, to which I will add the colors to make the stripes.

"The secret is in the pulling," he said. "We pull it like taffy and it turns white. We end up with a block as big as a barn and then keep it warm so it will remain pliable."

MAKING CANDY BY HAND is almost a forgotten art, according to Robotti, who said he doesn't know of anyone who makes candy canes in as many flavors as he does. He makes red and pink cinnamon canes, green striped wintergreen, peppermint in red and white and anise in red, white and green. He also makes orange and lemon candy canes which many people order as Christmas decofations.

Along with the canes, the candy mixture is also used to make hard candies, candle holders, small Christmas wreaths and tiny baskets which are later filled with chocolate balls.

From the one block of candy, Robboti can whip out about 90 candy canes an hour. He can make 300 of the small wreaths in the same amount of time. He said he usually goes through three blocks a day.

"He's the most patient man I've ever known," said his wife, Mary, who helps out in the shop. "He can sit for hours pulling candy and it really takes a strong arm. He has a great sense of humor, and when he gets tired of making the canes he goes into the other room and works with the chocolate machine, dipping various nuts and creme center candies."

THE ROBOTTI FAMILY moved to Carmel from Stamford, Conn., in 1965.

Son Brian works in the candy shop full time as does Mrs. Robotti.

One of the Robottis' daughters, Laurie, is attending Dominican College in San Rafael. "She grew up in the candy business and can handle almost all aspects of the shop," said Robotti. "When she visits she always comes to the shop to help out."

The Robottis' other daughter, Mary Lou, is married and lives in San Francisco where she is a nurse. Mary Lou and her husband, Nabil, frequently visit her parents, and their threeyear-old-son, Peter, loves to sit on grandpa's lap and feed dried fruit into the chocolate machine to be coated.

Robotti said his love of candy goes back to his youth when he worked for his uncle in a candy and ice cream shop.

"The Hansel and Gretel Candy Shop has been in Carmel for over 40 years," said Robotti. "Two weeks after we moved here I heard it was for sale, and since I wanted to go into my own business and had a background in candy, I decided to buy

Robotti said he started making candy canes the first year in business. "They're big business at Christmas," he said. "Even with the high cost of sugar and nuts, we seem to sell more each year."

Robotti also makes all-sugar candy for people who are allergic to corn products such as corn syrup.

"Nuts are sky high right now and it's almost impossible to find peanuts," said Robotti. "We make almost every type of candy, but this year we're a bit short on peanut clusters and peanut brittle."

When asked why he works so hard when there are machines available to do most of the work, he replied: "I love my work and I get great satisfaction out of pleasing people. I'm proud of the candy and strive to keep a high quality."

Robotti said he enjoys having people watch him work and that classes of local school children frequently come to the shop to watch him make the candy canes.

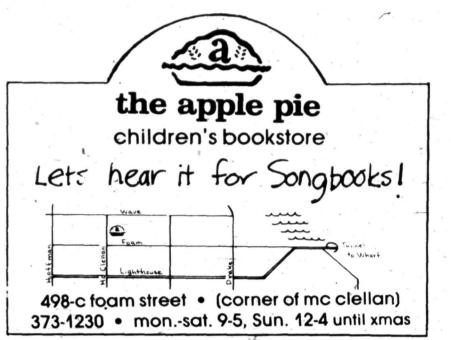

Popping a piece of candy cane in his mouth, Robotti reached for a new block of candy. "You know," he said, "I really do feel a bit like Santa Claus. Gotta make candy for all us kids.'

He jumped into the gold market at the right time

By FLORENCE MASON STEPHEN POGNI Jewelry

Right in the geographical center of "Paradise" is a jewelry concession owned by a young man who knew a good thing when he saw it.

Stephen Pogni was the business officer for a large mental institution in the East when he saw what was happening to the gold market and decided to jump in. His jewelry outlet within the store formerly known as David's (Ocean and Dolores) is his first on the West Coast. But he has two in New Jersey and one in Danbury, Conn.

Pogni can't stay in his Carmel Valley home as much as he would like to, however. Not only does he check in with his Linder is the financial director. In addition, Goetsch designed the custom-made racks for Sample Safari.

Managing and merchandising are the provinces of Mrs. Goetsch and Mrs. Linder, respectively. Mrs. Linder buys the sample women's sport clothes by Koret, Catalina, White Stag and other well-known manufacturers (in sizes 8, 10 and 12) while her mother, Mrs. Goetsch, manages the local store. It opened just before Thanksgiving in the Bell Tower Court at San Carlos and Seventh.

The word "sample" in the store's name speaks for itself; "safari" sets the theme for the store's decor and provides a focus for advertising. The clothes are for all seasons and places, however. A feature of Sample Safari is that it will have seasonal clothes before they appear in many other, larger stores; right now, customers will find spring lines from which to choose.

It all began because Mrs. Goetsch, a former nurse, had an operation and was unable to continue nursing; with daughter Mary Linder already in the field of women's clothes, it seemed a natural for them to open a similar store in Los Osos, south of Morro Bay, just a year ago. The store's first home was a double garage; within six months expansion became a necessity and they moved to a shopping center.

Continued success suggested further expansion, the Goetsches had always been "intrigued" by Carmel and, when they saw that this desirable location was available, they decided — within 24 hours, according to Goetsch — to take advantage of the opportunity.

As for the future, the start of the new year will bring a move for one of the couples. Which one? That is yet to be decided, but either the Goetsches or the Linders will become residents of Carmel in 1981 and will concentrate on our Sample Safari.

three eastern businesses regularly, but he jets around the country to various gold wholesale districts. In New York, Boston, San Francisco and other markets he handpicks the jewelry he features in his shop here: gold chains and chain bracelets (many imported from Italy), earrings and other pieces. Local artisans supply items that have special appeal for both residents and tourists: pine and cypress charms, cypress earrings and other jewelry that will remind the wearer of this area's special delights.

Until about four months ago, Pogni's world had been the eastern part of the United States. He grew up in a rural area outside Albany, N.Y., and went to college in New Jersey. However, since the early 1970s he had been coming to Carmel as a tourist and, like so many others, watched for an opportunity to set up a business here. It wasn't exactly a gold rush that brought him here, but gold had a lot to do with it.

Eventually, Pogni's jewelry shop will be a family affair. His fiance, Laura Wrzesinski, is the shop manager here and will be holding down the fort while Pogni attends to his eastern stores over this busy Christmas season. In future years, they hope to be able to share the holidays together — in Carmel.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in Pacific Grove for William T. Dummage, one of Carmel's pioneer residents and among the first to invest in property here. Dummage had been ill for the past several months and was recently operated on at the Carmel hospital.

As far back as 1890, Dummage invested in property but it was not until eight years later that he came here to permanently settle.

GROCERY CO-OP IN THE WINGS

It is rumored that 100 of Carmel's leading citizens are about to engage in a romantic avocation — the grocery business. Each is to pay in $100, and draw out 1% a month — while the money lasts. Somebody gets a job, some wholesaler or manufacturer sells some groceries, somebody rents a store, gets printing and advertising — and all buy groceries.

Should the experiment work — who knows — it might prove a first step in genuine communism. If we can sell ourselves groceries, why not publish our own newspaper, make our own automobiles, sell ourselves shirts, houses why pay anybody anything!

County ordinance

Many complain about new law requiring low-income CV housing

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE ORDINANCE that Monterey County hopes will provide the near-impossible in today's economy-housing affordable to the average worker—is receiving little praise from its makers and

A select lawyers' committee hammered out the so-called "inclusionary housing ordinance" through several months of work, yet one of the lawyers terms it a sloppy law full of loopholes.

The ordinance requires developers of any project of five units or more to set aside low- and moderate-income lots or homes equivalent to 15 percent of the project. But according to several developers, it will leave Carmel Valley with just a token number of the units.

Flexibility clauses built into the ordinance allow developers several options, including locating the units or lots outside the project and in other areas of the county.

While several Carmel Valley developers conceded a moral commitment to build affordable housing for workers in the Valley, they insisted that the high cost of land and the ready market for expensive homes make it an illogical place for the

In the words of one developer who predicted he would lose $1.8 million if he includes the units in his Valley project, "It's economic suicide."

The county was ordered by the state to prepare, adopt and implement the ordinance by Dec. 1, and state officials contend that the ordinance is workable. One state official said the profit margin for developers in Monterey County is still large enough; their projects are economically feasible with the ordinance.

The state, however, may be alone in its judgment of a law that the county and the developers charge will not only fail to do what is intended, but actually work to its detriment.

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors approved the ordinance Nov. 29 as a major part of its threeyear General Plan revision, and yet the board chairman says he hates the ordinance and considers it unworkable.

"I hate it, I think it stinks," Chairman Michal Moore said. He charged that the ordinance his board was pressured to adopt in the face of political threats from the state will raise home costs, diminish the housing market and fail to equitably spread the burden of providing affordable housing to workers.

THE STATE Office of Planning and Research (OPR) ordered the supervisors to approve and implement the inclusionary housing ordinance by Dec. 1 or face losing a oneyear extension that OPR had granted the county to revise its General Plan.

The extension provided the county immunity from lawsuits against its General Plan, and without the extension the county would have been open to court actions that could have shut down development altogether.

The state's hard stand was prompted in part by the severe need for housing in Monterey County that will be affordable to its elderly, single parents, renters, minorities and workers.

A June 1980 Housing Needs Analysis prepared by the county Planning Department noted that between 1972 and 1979 the county's increase in housing lagged three percent behind its number of new households. The vacancy rate declined from 2.8 percent to 2 percent during the period 1970-76, the study also noted.

The study further noted that from 1970 to 1976—when the Consumer Price Index increased 45 percent or double the 22 percent rise in median income—inflation, rising interest rates, construction prices and land costs greatly diminished the consumers' capacity for home purchase.

Figures from 1978, according to the study, showed one-fifth of the county's 92,000 households were overpaying for housing, with more than 60 percent of the elderly renters overpaying above state and federally accepted portions of their

CHAIRMAN MOORE acknowledged that the supervisors recognize the severe need for affordable housing. He said the county had moved to encourage its construction by creating incentives for low-interest loans. But that approach was scrapped, he recalled, as soon as the state in 1979 ordered the county to prepare and adopt a 15 percent inclusionary housing ordinance as a condition of its General Plan extension.

The county was in no position to refuse the state's order. It had applied to OPR for the extension after the county was slapped with a lawsuit attacking its General Plan and its approval of the Carmel Valley Ranch development. The lawsuit filed by Harry Holt of Carmel was later dismissed in Monterey County Superior Court on the basis of immunities provided in the OPR extension.

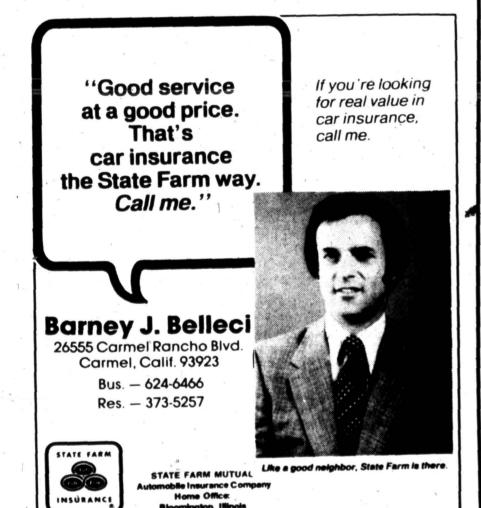

The fact that the county was left with no choice but to approve the housing ordinance is something that Moore simply called "an accident of bad timing."

THE SPECTER of losing the OPR extension and suffering a building moratorium forced by lawsuits also worried the Association of General Contractors.

The AGC, which had publicly opposed the housing ordinance, did an about-face and quietly spearheaded its adoption.

the ordinance to work, but he admitted it has serious drawbacks at a time when low- and moderate-income housing is essentially a thing of the past.

Eric Short is a vice president of Daniels and House Construction Co. of Monterey, a leading contractor in the county and one that is involved in several projects in Carmel Valley, including Carmel Valley Ranch and Village Greens.

"The AGC was instrumental in making the ordinance workable," Short said in an interview.

He explained that AGC supported the basic idea to integrate housing units within a project or locate them in other areas already under development.

The problem, he acknowledged, is that the developer is being required to provide 15 percent of his project or its equivalent in low- and moderate-income housing which the developer is not going to profit on. The ramifications are manifold he said.

"It doesn't take a genius to see that the ordinance puts a burden on the developer that he will just pass on to the buyers of the regular units," Short said.

The easy way out for many developers will be the flexibility clause that allows them to pay the county an "in-lieu fee" instead of building units or providing lots, Short said.

The county in theory will use the money to buy land and construct low- and moderate-income housing. But as one lawyer noted, it is more efficient for the developer with his financing and construction ties to build the housing than the Payment of an in-lieu fee is not favored by the county, Short conceded, and he added that it will count against approval of a

Regardless of the option used to comply with the ordinance. Short concluded: "It is a subsidy of low-cost housing that is going to take some getting used to."

JOHN ATHA, an official of the state Department of Housing and Community Development, has followed the ordinance and, until earlier this year, was the state's chief watchdog over it.

He acknowledged that the ordinance is not perfect, but he maintained that the warnings of failure raised by the developers are not proven from past experience.

"In almost every instance in other counties," Atha said, "the developers said, 'I can't do that,' then complied and still made a substantial profit."

The concept of inclusionary housing has worked even in localities with high costs for development and low demand for units so long as the developer's profit margin was substantial enough to absorb the losses on the low- and moderate-income units, Atha explained.

"It should work in Monterey County and Carmel Valley, because the margin of profit is high enough," he said.

Atha said that the provision allowing units to be placed offsite and in other localities is the biggest pitfall in the ordinance, but he acknowledged that it was a necessary trade-off.

Asked if the ordinance is workable beyond just being a political trade-off between the state, county and private enterprise, Atha replied, "There's only one test: If it's too expensive to use it, developers will stop in the area and go elsewhere. The real test is if the number of permit applications

The flexibility clauses may have been necessary to make the ordinance politically and economically feasible, but they are also its most vulnerable Achilles heel.

County officials concede that many of the low- and moderate-income units will end up in less exclusive areas of the county, from Castroville to San Ardo. And because the county expects many developers to put their required units in outlying areas, it is negotiating with several cities to accept a quota of PACIFIC GROVE, however, has decided in a move that could signal the same from other cities that it does not want to participate in the ordinance.

Mayor Florus Williams informed the county in a letter Nov. 20 that the City Council had reviewed the ordinance and was disturbed that it had not been consulted in its preparation.

"The city takes the position," Williams stated, "that this ordinance has application only in the county unincorporated turn out to be an unfortunate experiment."

area. The council has indicated it does not wish to participate in its implementation."

Pacific Grove's stand against the ordinance was the first and only one that the county has received, according to Nick Chiulos, senior planner for the county Planning Department.

Chiulos said he did not know if other cities would follow Pacific Grove in opposing implementation of the ordinance. He noted that the AGC had at first opposed the ordinance and then changed its mind when it realized it was to its benefit to see the ordinance adopted.

While the county is currently preparing the measures that will implement the ordinance, Chiulos said the cities were being closely informed of the progress. Sometime soon after Jan. 1, he said, the county will negotiate with the cities to accept a quota of the units:

"We hope it will be a productive meeting," he said. "the county is trying to deal with it (the ordinance) as constructively as possible, considering it was something we had to do."

MONTEREY LAWYER Thomas Jamison represented the Pebble Beach Corp. on the lawyers committee that prepared the ordinance.

He contended that if the ordinance fails it will be because it was just another layer of government red tape that put the price of homes out of sight.

Jamison did not dispute, however, that if developers are going to build in Monterey county they will have to live with the ordinance. For that reason, he admitted, he was hired to help prepare an ordinance that would work. He agreed that the flexibility clauses or loopholes are both the truth and evil of the ordinance.

"It doesn't make sense to have low- and moderate-income housing in every project," he said.

"It doesn't make sense to include the units in Cachagua when they should be near transportation and employment centers."

Does he expect developers in Carmel Valley to put their required units on-site or somewhere outside the area?

Jamison said it would depend on the developer and his options.

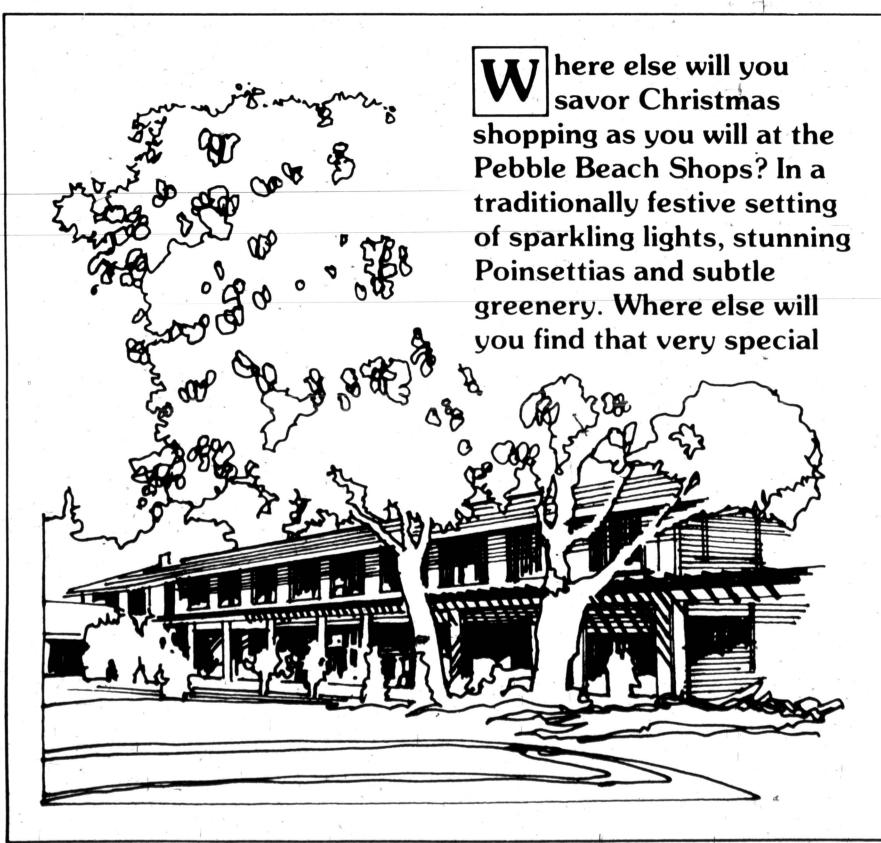

Locating the units off-site but on land elsewhere in the Valley is doubtful, he said, because of the lack of cheap land to make that option feasible.

Putting the units on-site, he noted, is favored in the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan. Under the new Master Plan developers would have to compete in a point system for approval of their project, and inclusion of low and moderateincome units in a project would be significantly counted.

Ultimately, Jamison said, the number of low- and moderate-income units that are built in Carmel Valley will depend on how the Master Plan is implemented and what kind of measures the county adopts to implement its inclusionary housing ordinance.

"If the ordinance doesn't work," Jamison said, "it could

Builders: CV to get home for low-incomes

By STEVE HELLMAN

CARMEL VALLEY DEVELOPERS say they will comply with Monterey County's inclusionary housing ordinance by building the low- and moderate-income units in the Valley.

But while one developer said he planned to build more of the units than the ordinance requires, another developer admitted he planned to provide only a token few for the employees who would work in his subdivision.

Richard Pryor, developer of the proposed 223-lot Holt Ranch subdivision, said he will build more than his share of low- and moderate-income units because of a moral commitment.

"It's necessary to have housing available for people who work in the Valley, teachers, firemen, writers," he said.

His project would have 175 lots with homes costing an average of $250,000, with 48 moderate-income units selling for about $60,000.

Building low-income units in the Valley is economically out of the question, he said. He added that he is only required to build 25 moderate-income units, and by building 48 units instead, he will receive a density bonus that he can sell to other developers. Sale of the density bonus would offset what Pryor said would be a $1.8 million loss on moderate-income units.

He added that the $1.8 million was not a direct loss, but represented the gross sales he would have received on what he said are 12 premium lots that will be set aside as the site for the 48 moderate-income units.

Pryor admitted that he is an exception to a rule that few developers will build their moderate-income units in the Valley.

"It's economic suicide to build the units in the Valley," he said, and added that because of the loopholes in the ordinance, developers will more likely build the units outside the area, for example, in Salinas.

BILL CUSACK JR., developer of the proposed 201-lot La Cuesta subdivision, said he intends to build five to 10 moderate-income units on-site, with the rest in Salinas.

The moderate income units built on-site would be strictly rental units for persons employed by the subdivision, maintenance and gardening employees. What moderate-income units that might not be filled by subdivision workers would be offered on a priority basis to other persons employed in the Valley, Cusack said.

The same concept would be applied to a 16-unit project that he has proposed on 32 acres near Schulte Road, Cusack added. Three existing homes on the agricultural property would be upgraded, he said, to serve as moderate-income rental units for farm workers.

"Whatever development we create," he said, "we should provide housing for the workers."

The problem with the ordinance, Cusack claimed, is that it is easier for the large-scale developer to comply with it than for smaller developers who do not have as much capital or land options to work with.

ED HABER, developer of the proposed 65-lot Quail Meadows subdivision, said he would comply with the ordinance by putting the units on-site.

Also proposed on his 600-acre parcel is a 40-unit seminar facility, and Haber said the moderate-income units would be built for employees of the facility and his other employees at Quail Lodge and Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

Here's how the housing ordinance works

MONTEREY COUNTY'S inclusionary housing ordinance basically requires developers of residential projects of five or more units to provide 15 percent of their project or the equivalent in units or land for low-and moderate-income housing.

The low- and moderate-income units can be built in the project, off-site or in other projects in the county.

Flexibility clauses in the ordinance also allow a developer who builds more than his required share of the units a density bonus that he can either sell to another developer or use to increase the building density in another project.

Land can also be donated by a developer to the county to comply with the ordinance.

If a developer does not want to donate land or provide units, he can purchase density bonuses from another developer to satisfy the ordinance.

In hardship cases, a developer can pay an "in-lieu" fee to be determined by the county instead of providing units or land.

Developers of projects of four units or less are bound by the same requirements and options, although their contribution is pro-rated downward according to the size of the project. The inclusionary rquirement for four units or lots is 12 percent, for three units or lots 9 percent, for two units or lots 4 percent and for one unit or lot 2 percent.

The builder of an owner-occupied home is exempt from the ordinance.

Resale of low- and moderate-income housing units is strictly controlled through deed restrictions. The ordinance allows the owner to first offer the unit for sale to the Monterey County Housing Authority, and if it is refused, then he can sell it on the open market. In either case, the price of the home is controlled by several factors.

The resale price shall be the original price of the home plus any closing fees, multiplied by:

• The percentage of increase in the county median income between the date the owner purchased the inclusionary unit and the date the owner's offer was accepted; plus

• The depreciated (straight line) value of any improvement, appliance, fixture or equipment which originally cost less than $5,000 and the (appraised) value of any improvement, appliance, fixture or equipment which originally cost more than $5,000.

padre sports

By ELIZABETH SARET

Ho HUM, (yawn), zzzz.

Sorry about that. Excuse me for dropping off, but you must understand this is the roundball season again. Roundball, sometimes referred to as basketball, is the game that fills the hiatus between fall and spring in the sporting world. Frankly, I'd rather watch a race between glaciers than a bunch of guys throwing a basketball at the descendants of a peach basket.

Everyone knows how the game got started. A reasonably educated fellow named Dr. Naismith wanted to keep his athletes active during the "off-season" in colder climes. Now Dr. N. had the school custodian, a man named Williams or Wilson according to trivia buffs, nail a couple of peach baskets at either end of the gymnasium at Springfield (Mass.) College. It's a wonder that the sport ever caught on as the first game saw only one goal scored. Of course there was only a single goal because the players couldn't get the ball out of the basket because the janitor had taken the ladder away. Whoever got the idea to cut the hole in the bottom of the peach basket is the real inventor of the game and responsible for much of this writer's boredom.

Only last year I watched a local team go into a half-court stall for more than seven minutes. Is anyone in his right mind going to pay good money to watch some guy dribble?

The problem with the game of basketball is that the players can be so bad that you think they're performing a Greek tragedy, or so good you think Hollywood wrote the script. The pros miss about as often as a firing squad, and the amateurs hit about as often as Willie Wilson did for Kansas City in the Series. The only reason I mention the sport of roundball is that a couple of times a year I can turn on the television and watch a forward for Philadelphia by the name of Dr. J. ride the wave of the fastbreak, leave the floor about midcourt and stuff a synthetic spheroid through a hoop of steel with less effort than it takes Julia Child to drop a meringue glace on the studio floor.

So here we are. It's basketball time again. The Padre's have a team that's unsung. Let's hope they don't end up unknown.

New CUSD sex education courses are proposed

By STEVE HELLMAN

AFTER MORE than a year and a half without sex education in the Carmel schools, a comprehensive human sexuality program has been proposed to restore the controversial curriculum.

Sex education was halted in early 1979 after some parents complained about a graphic questionnaire used as a discussion tool in a health class at Carmel High School.

The brouhaha prompted the Board of Education to select a blue-ribbon committee for developing a sex education program that would follow state guidelines and conform to community views on teenage sexuality, pregnancy and contraception.

The 29-member committee, comprised of school administrators, teachers, doctors, parents, a minister and two students, recently completed its proposed human sexuality programs for Carmel High and Middle schools.

THE SCHOOL BOARD will conduct a public hearing on the programs at its Dec. 16 meeting.

After recommendations from board members and parents, the board will consider final programs for adoption in January. The sex education courses would begin in the spring 1981 semester.

The programs were officially submitted to the school board last week. There was no comment from board members except Chairman Ken White, who said he had already read through the proposed curriculum and course materials twice.

"I have strong statements to make about it," White said, but he and the board members are withholding comment until

Sixth grade will remain at Middle School

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION of the Carmel Unified School District expressed interest last week in a plan to return the sixth grade from Carmel Middle School to the elementary schools.

Based on a preliminary analysis by the Administrative Council, a group of local and regional school administrators, however, the board decided that the move was not needed at this time; it was concerned the move could harm programs at the Middle School.

Further study of the move was requested by the board, which cited declining enrollment and the need for a long-range school sites plan.

"We have no plan of where we're going," Trustee Doyle Clayton said of declining enrollments.

The plan would move sixth grade students from Middle School, leaving it with grades seven and eight while augmenting enrollment in the neighborhood elementary schools.

Trustee Ron Parravano noted that there is widespread support in the district for the neighborhood schools, and he said he would not want to do anything that could harm them.

The Administrative Council's preliminary analysis noted among the disadvantages of the move that it would congest the playgrounds and facilities at River and Woods elementary schools.

The effect on the sixth-graders was also a major concern, Parravano cited. He recommended that a study of the move include an analysis of the emotional needs of sixth-graders, the cost-benefits and the detriments to Carmel Middle School. He called for an advisory committee to be appointed to explore the concept of moving the sixth grade.

Chairman Ken White said he was not in favor of moving the sixth grade.

But if enrollment drops at Middle School, he said, and if a study finds that sixth-graders would be offered more in the elementary schools, then White said he might support the

Trustee Barbara Sanford suggested that students should be allowed to choose whether or not they move. Superintendent William Rand said the Administrative Council could present a more detailed and comprehensive analysis to the board at its Jan. 13 meeting.

The Administrative Council's preliminary analysis cited the following disadvantages to moving sixth grade: The departmentalized program at Middle School is stronger in academic areas because of teacher specialization; even with some departmentalization in the fourth-to-sixth grades, there would be a loss of opportunities in foreign languages, science, arts and crafts and physical education; elementary libraries are not well equipped for sixth-graders' needs; moving Middle School teachers to elementary schools would present a variety of staffing problems and hinder the quality of teaching.

The advantages cited a benefit from the delay in the social adjustment to older students, decrease in parental anxiety over students going to Middle School, reduced bus time for some students, cost-saving by reducing counselor and administrative positions and the availability of space at the schools.

the Dec. 16 meeting.

A MINORITY REPORT suggesting a more positive approach to sex education was presented to the school board. The one-page report was submitted by parent representatives of the 14-member subcommittee that collected and developed the curriculum outline and course materials.

It called for "a positive attitude toward sexuality as opposed to a negative emphasis on sexual activity, and encouragement of student-parent communication and cooperation."

There is a need for correcting and renewing material on contraception and venereal disease, the report stated, while "material from private advocacy groups is not acceptable for use within the public school system."

Materials in programs for both the high school and middle school include a venereal disease questionnaire, anatomy and physiology test, a resource list for counseling and contraceptives, a test on reproduction, an outline for discussion of case studies, a decision-making exercise on dating, a comparison between love and infatuation and a sexuality questionnaire with an emphasis on pregnancy.

The high school program also includes a vocabulary list of sexual, anatomical and medical terms and a fact sheet on the methods of contraception with side-effects, efficiency rating and requirements for use.

With an emphasis on the implications of teenage sexual activity, both programs present statistical sheets on the number of pregnancies each year in the state, number of abortions, cost of child-raising and reported cases of venereal disease.

Both programs also list the legal mandates for sex education in schools, recommend times for course and instructors and propose outside presentations from doctors, clergymen, nurses and other specialists.

purposes of the sex education program should be:

- To increase the student's knowledge of human sexuality, including anatomy, physiology, venereal disease and human relationships.
- To affirm the importance of the family as the basic support unit for nurturing and developing values.
- To enhance the student's self-esteem and ability to relate
- To develop positive attitudes toward sexuality; to accept one's own sexuality as something positive and healthy.
- To increase positive and realistic attitudes toward marriage and child-bearing.
- To improve the student's decision-making abilities in areas of human sexuality and personal relationships.
- To reduce venereal disease among teenagers and to reduce pregnancies among unmarried teenagers.

School Superintendent William Rand noted last week that the committee conducted 19 subcommittee and large-group meetings during the 1979-80 school year. He said it reviewed the high school and middle school curriculum and curriculum from other schools, previewed films and listened to presentations from Planned Parenthood, Children's Home Society and the Monterey County Office of Education. Members of the subcommittee that developed the curriculum and course materials are: Merideth Adams, nurse; Richard Fletcher, high school teacher; Callie Gonzales, nurse; Jim Kohnke, principal and teacher at Carmel Valley High School; Arnold Manor, doctor; Ginger Marto, parent; Joan O'Hara, parent; Gail Palumbo, parent; Ruth Peace, retired elementary school teacher: Superintendent Rand: Donald Scanlon, doctor; Louise Tanous, high school teacher; Les Young, middle school teacher, and Sue Williams-Pierik, high school teacher.

Other members of the full committee are: Mr. and Mrs. John Bernardi, parents; the Rev. James Brock; Vance Frasier, elementary school principal; Diane Garneau, parent; Sidney Kay, retired doctor; Col. L. Lazzarini, parent; Fran Leary, parent; Nancy Loder, parent; Nick Nicholson, middle school principal; Theresa Ostrander, student; Linda Radon, parent; Jerry Rubin, doctor; Howard Sanborn, high school teacher, and Fred Terman, student.

State law says

sex class not mandatory

STATE LAW requires that a school board cannot require students to attend any class in which human reproductive organs and their functions and processes are described, illustrated or discussed.

The Schmitz Act holds that if classes discuss the reproductive organs, the parent or guardian of each student in the class shall first be notified in writing of the class.

Any written or audiovisual material to be used concerning human reproductive organs shall be available for inspection by the parent or guardian at reasonable times and places before the course begins, the act states.

The parent may request that his child be excluded from the class. The Schmitz Act also provides excuse from any health instruction and family life and sex education course if it conflicts with a family's religious beliefs.

The request to exclude a child from class must be made in writing, according to the law.

While it is not required by state law, parents in the Carmel Unified School District will also be asked to submit signed statements permitting their children to attend sex education courses, according to Superintendent William Rand.

Yule tree

tips are given

Christmas trees become extremely flammable when cut long in advance of use and when brought indoors where heat and low humidity accelerate drying.

To reduce that hazard, the following Christmas tree safety tips, from the Fire Prevention bureaus of Carmel Valley, Mid-Carmel Valley and Carmel Highlands Fire Departments, should be followed.

1. When buying a fresh cut tree, choose one which has not begun to dry out.

2. When buying an artificial tree, choose one with a flame-retardant label.

3. Place the tree in a pail of water until ready to decorate.

4. Use only tree stands that will hold water or wet sand. Refill the stand with water daily until the tree is discarded.

5. Don't set a Christmas tree near doors, stairways or corridors where it is likely to be knocked over or block exits in case of fire.

6. Don't set a Christmas tree near radiators, warm-air ducts or any heat source which would tend to dry it

7. Use only U.L.(Underwriters Laboratories) listed electrical equipment. Check for frayed cords, loose or cracked wires, sockets or connections. Never overload tree light circuits.

8. Don't use electric lights on metallic trees. The tree may become energized and shock persons touching it. A small spotlight placed on the ground and beamed at the tree will produce desirable effects safely. 9. Turn off all tree lights and electrical devices before leaving the house or retiring.

Storm cuts power; record wind hits

By JOANNE HODGEN

DRIVING RAINS and gusts of wind up to 62 mph toppled trees and cut power to Carmel Valley and Carmel area homes in the season's first major storm Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 3 and 4.

Power outages affected 4,600 homes and businesses on the Monterey Peninsula, according to Joseph Cowan, district manager for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. Hardest hit were Carmel, Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach, he said, where some homes were without power for up to 26 hours.

Problems began early Wednesday morning, Cowan said, when downed trees in Monterey fell on power lines and affected power to the upper Carmel area. "We were really hit badly from 3 to 6 p.m. (Wednesday)," he said, "when they recorded gusts up to 62 mph."

Though the damage was not as severe as in last year's Christmas storm, "It was bad enough," Cowan said.

Cleanup began immediately in Carmel, according to Superintendent of Public Works Bill Askew.

He said a street sweeper was put into operation for 12-hour shifts to clean up dried pine needles blown from trees that covered Carmel streets like snow.

"We had quite a bit of tree breakage," Askew said, "but nothing out of the ordinary.

"We normally have this many pine needles down. But it makes it bad when you get rain and wind together." An accumulation of needles can plug the drainage system unless it is cleaned before the next rainstorm, he said. It will take about a month, Askew said, to completely clean up streets. However, with another storm, the problem could start again, Askew said. "There's still plenty of needles to come down."

DON WILSON, maintenance engineer for the Monterey County Public Works Department, said that nothing unusual occurred in Carmel Valley. "We had a few trees down. That's normal with those kinds of winds," he said. No homes were damaged from falling limbs or trees, according to Wilson.

Unlike the City of Carmel, which sweeps up pine needles, Wilson said the county lets traffic blow the needles into the

He said crews were out Wednesday night to take care of a few fallen trees.

THE TWO-DAY STORM dumped up to three inches of rain in the mountains surrounding Carmel Valley, according to Bob Renard, a meteorologist in Monterey for the National Weather Service.

He estimated a rainfall of one to two inches along the floor of Carmel Valley and about 11/2 inches in Carmel.

On Wednesday, winds gusted more than 50 mph several times, he said. The 62 mph gust at 6 p.m. was the highest ever recorded at his weather station, Renard said.

During the Christmas storm last year the highest gust was 58 mph, according to Renard.

"Everything is back to a high pressure system. Nights will be quite cold with temperatures in the 30s," he said.

The weather pattern now means no rain for awhile. "I would go out on a limb to say at least 10 days (Dec. 15) from the information we have," Renard said.

Carmel Ceremony

CARMEL'S Christmas tree, at Ocean and Junipero, was officially lighted in brief ceremonies over the weekend. Before the ceremony, the choir from Carmel Presbyterian Church (top) entertained at Carmel Plaza was Santa (left) who took care of many children lined up waiting to see him.

Small Claims Court lets you be your own lawyer

In every county in California there is a court where legal disputes are handled in an uncomplicated manner and where attorneys are not allowed: Small Claims Court.

The Small Claims Court is designed for the resolution of disputes where the amount of money involved is small and it is not worth it to the parties to hire a lawyer to assist them.

While most people think of lawsuits strictly as actions to obtain money from some other person, a great many of the lawsuits actually filed every year do not involve the request for money, but actually seek some other kind of relief, such as an injunction or an order to get a nonpaying tenant out of a house. In Small Claims Court you may sue only for money, and if you seek more than $750 you may not use the Small Claims Court.

As with any other court, a judge — either a justice court judge or a municipal court judge — actually hears the case (no jury is allowed in Small Claims Court). And, as in other cases, only persons who are 18 or older may file a suit in Small Claims Court, unless they have a parent or guardian who will appear with them.

Even though the jurisdictional limit is $750, many people who have a claim somewhat higher find it advisable to reduce their request to $750, file in Small Claims Court and avoid the expense of attorney's fees.

Although there are a great many advantages to Small Claims Court for the person who claims that someone else owes him money, there is one disadvantage that everyone considering bringing a Small Claims Court action must bear in mind. That is that the plaintiff (the person who files the suit) cannot appeal the case if he loses. However, if the defendant (the person who is sued) loses the case, he can appeal.

(To obtain a copy of the California Trial Lawyers Association's Small Claims Court pamphlet, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to CTLA, 1020 12th St., Sacramento 95814.)

AIR SHOCK ABSORBERS

The ENERGaire inflated pads (1, 2) extend outward to cushion your feet and body with each step. These pads act as shock absorbers to reduce fatigue. The air transfer passage (3) joins the inflated pads together and allows the air to move back and forth. This action lifts your heels and rolls you forward in a gentle, frictionless manner.

INFLATABLE—ADJUSTABLE

Conventional shoes make no allowances for human weight differences. But the new ENERGaire shoes have an inflation valve (4) like a basketball, so you can put in the amount of air most comfortable for you! A free pump is included. This is the first inflatable, adjustable shoe in the world! So revolutionary, it's

CVPOA conducting election

THE CARMEL VALLEY PROPERTY Owners Association is conducting its annual election with seven candidates vying for four seats on its board of directors.

The mail-in balloting for five officers and the four two-year terms on the board will end Dec. 15.

The 1,000-member association, which serves as a watchdog for land-use affairs in the Valley, will install its new officers and board members at a general membership meeting Jan. 14.

Candidates for the board are: Paul Beemer, retired engineer; Warren Belfer, solar business owner; Nancy Burnett, mother; Richard Dalsemer, former Washington, D.C. environmental lobbyist; Herbert Holbrook, retired corporate executive; Anne McGowan, lawyer, and Karin Strasser-Kauffman, political science professor.

Running unopposed for the five offices are: Jack Sassard, president; Robert Greenwood, vice president; Evelyn Smart, recording secretary; Jacqueline Marks, corresponding secretary, and Lynn Morris, treasurer.

The background and positions of the seven board candidates were outlined in written statements on the mail ballot. Support for the new Carmel Valley Master Plan, preserving the rural character of the Valley and limiting growth were listed repeatedly as priorities.

BEEMER, who lives on Outlook Terrace, moved to the Valley from Laguna Beach in 1976.

Before retiring, he noted he was an engineer with management positions in several companies. A former president of the Carmel Views Community Association, Beemer said he has been active in community affairs for more than 20 years, serving also as a director of the local water board in Laguna Beach.

"I would like to help in protecting our Valley," Beemer stated. He said he supports the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan as being restrictive, but reasonable, and he noted that he is especially concerned with development in the lower Valley, including plans for the proposed High Meadow II subdivision.

BELFER, who owns Solar Heating Co. in Carmel Valley, stated that every effort must be made to retain the Valley as a unique and beautiful place.

"Development must be limited to the carrying capacity of the ecology and limited to what can be accommodated by the public services available, roads, water and sewer," Belfer

He insisted that expansion of services should be subordinate to preserving the rural character of the Valley.

MRS. BURNETT noted that she is a marine biologist by training, but listed her current occupation as mothering. A Valley resident for eight years, she lives on Boronda

She was a member of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Study Committee and was a one-year member of the Upper Valley Citizens Advisory Committee to the county Planning Commission. "I feel that both the rural beauty and the natural resources of the Valley must be protected as we allow for limited growth," she stated. She called for protection of the underground aquifer, river corridor and other natural resources.

DALSEMER, a former president and director of the Environmental Action Foundation in Washington, D.C., has lived in the Valley 2½ years and resides on Aliso Road.

He said he supports quick readoption of the new Carmel Valley Master Plan, stabilization of the Carmel River and repair of erosion damage. A top priority, Dalsemer stated, would be the careful supervision for moderate, well-planned development.

"Our county is in danger of becoming a bedroom community for areas to the north," he stated. "I don't want this to happen to beautiful, semi-rural Carmel Valley."

HOLBROOK, who moved to Del Mesa Carmel in 1977, noted he had 30 years' experience with three multi-national companies and was a consultant to the Stanford Research Institute before retiring. A vestryman at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church and a trustee of All Saints' Episcopal Day School, Holbrook said he has long been active in community

Noting that there are more than 200 members of the CVPOA in Del Mesa Carmel, Holbrook said he is dedicated to preserving "all that is best in Carmel Valley living and to

After the storm

Dear Editor:

Notes by candlelight, Dec. 3, 1980:

First storm of the season. Early afternoon. High winds. Rain in spurts. Large branch of tree on west side Devendorf Park down, mainly on hedge. Call to Lois, nerve center of Public Works. Within 15 minutes crew with chipper truck at work. Ten minutes later, site immaculate. Crew on to next call.

About 7:30 p.m. Lights out around First and Mission area. much stronger winds. 24-foot pine twisted off about 10 feet above ground. Mission blocked. Phone, power lines down. Within 20 minutes small reconnoitering truck places cones, flares. Ten minutes later, two large trucks stagelight the area. Chainsaw crew goes to work. Stump felled with professional angle cut/straight cut technique. Trunk segmented and loaded in truck. Great good humor and gusto. Twenty minutes later street open, area cleaned up, dangerous lines coiled. Trucks on way to next assignments.

Bill, Greg and the crew all out in the weather all day and deep into the night. Public Works and Forestry all blue-ribbon champs.

Dave Hughes Carmel

Natural healing

Dear Editor:

Three cheers for the Pine Cone.

I was so happy to see the well-written article entitled "He changed his lifestyle to fight a rare disease." I personally believe that all healing is natural, but it is refreshing to see that natural methods are being given well-deserved recognition as a valid form of health care, despite the fact that the medical community has not yet given its sanction to them. If the Wright brothers had waited for the approval of the contemporary scientific community, we might still be watching the birds with envy and awe.

Because of the courage of those such as Mr. Chorney and the Pine Cone, more people will exercise their freedom of choice in health care and at least become aware of these alternative methods of health restoration.

Thanks from Farr

Dear Editor:

I want to thank you for support of my candidacy for the Assembly, as reflected in the editorial published just prior to election day.

From my vantage point, we have shared similar views on most major issues before the country, state and area. We did — and do — not feel the same about the Carmel Valley Ranch, but we now have an opportunity to let bygones be bygones. I appreciate the fact that you allowed me to address the Ranch issue, unedited, in your candidate survey. That survey was the most penetrating and telling article published on local and regional candidates, in my opinion. I applaud your giving the space to the candidates and their views, and only hope that the policy continues.

Again, I appreciate the fact that you were willing to say "I violently disagree with Sam Farr on one issue, but on balance he is the best choice," or words to that effect.

I look forward to serving the residents of the Monterey Bay area, and to working with you on legislative activities of interest to the Carmel and Carmel Valley area.

Hidden Valley Opera

Dear Editor:

For those of us who have been enthralled by the beauty, grace and spirit of Hidden Valley Opera and Musical Theater productions, it leaves a dreadful hole to face a season without them.

After surviving so many crises, such as the last $17,000 to pay for the dormitory which accounted for being behind on that first year's rent, it was a shocker to be faced with paying up or eviction in 30 days.

How many of us can afford the tiresome trip and expense of attending the San Francisco Opera? Fine as those performances are, the sense of involvement with talented young singers in a small theater in-the-round, the excitement of watching them develop and making them our friends as the season went on, just couldn't be there.

Hidden Valley has enriched our musical lives so much during the past 10 years. We should be grateful for the chance to participate in nurturing the talents of such gifted young musicians.

Most of all, we should be grateful to Peter Meckel for his unerring taste in choosing the right performers, faculty members, assistants and vehicles to best showcase his young singers and instrumentalists.

I feel personally deprived that I may never get to see Hidden Valley do Brigadoon or Debussy's Pelleas and Melisande among other favorites.

As every other opera and theater company in the land will attest, it costs a lot to mount an opera or a musical.

HARRY ROGERS and daughter, Morgan, roll along on their way to see Santa at The Barnyard in Carmel.

Clothier has submitted her resignation effective Dec. 15.

She and her husband, Bob, will depart for Ireland Dec. 29 where they will travel for two to six months, she said.

Mary Jahr-Purvis, who filled in as city clerk recently, has been hired to replace Mrs. Clothier. Starting salary is $1,024 monthly.

Post office hours extended

Window service of both the Main and Carmel-by-the-Sea post offices will be extended to 6 p.m. Dec. 11, 12, 15 and 16.

There will be no Saturday or Sunday window service this year.

Mrs. Clothier, 37, worked for the Building and Planning departments from 1972 to 1976. She was again hired in January.

She said working for Planning Director Bob Griggs and with "a good gang of people" was the most enjoyable part of her job.

Griggs agreed. "We're not only fellow employees, we're personal friends," he said.

Mrs. Jahr-Purvis, 36, is married to David Jarvis and lives in Monterey.

She had worked for a general contractor in Los Angeles, where she said she worked extensively with plans and maps.

She brought her pink hard hat, given to her at her job in Los Angeles, to City Hall. Griggs quipped, "She'll need it working for me."

Housing problems aired

By BARNEY LAIOLO

By THE TIME you read this, we will have had a joint meeting on housing problems which had representation from all the cities on the Peninsula and the county Board of Supervisors.

The purpose was to discuss housing needs and future planning on a county basis. I will inform you next week of the outcome.

REGARDING THE RECREATION Committee, the latest results are the official unanimous support by the City Council and the Carmel Unified School District.

At our meeting Dec. 4, it was agreed that we would be ready to set a date for a public meeting to present the information we have accumulated and to hear from residents their thoughts on recreation.

WE CAME THROUGH the last storm quite lucky.

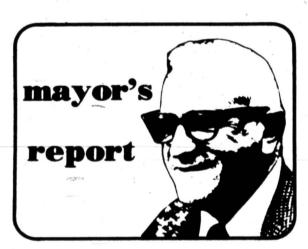

Several limbs and some tree sections were lost, but by and large, it was mostly just a miserable pick-up job. I would like to congratulate the street and forestry crews for their fine and prompt action in keeping our streets and our drains working.

Nice work, men.

WHILE ON this subject, I would appreciate hearing from anyone who is a resident of the city and has a background in forestry or horticulture to contact City Hall.

We will be having to replace one of our long-time members who decided to resign after eight years of service on the Forestry Commission. Please let me know of any names of persons interested in serving on this commission.

STILL IN THAT same vein, the Native Plant Society, with the assistance of the Boy Scouts, has just about completed the arboretum at Mission Trail Park.

It will be completed very soon and all the labels will be attached. This is for all to enjoy and learn more of nature.

Plan on going for a nice stroll and get to know all parts of your city.

CONGRATULATIONS to the Carmel Business Association and all the merchants for the well-planned programs for Christmas and the beautiful window displays that have appeared all over town.

Please come and see for yourself and help our merchants by shopping in town.

In CLOSING, a sadder note for those who did not see the article in last week's Pine Cone regarding help for the people of Italy who were left homeless and ill by the earthquake

I would appreciate your sending a check to the Italian Heritage Society, Box 367, Monterey 93940. If you could spare any warm clothing, boots, blankets, etc., we will be accepting those articles at City Hall on Monte Verde Street between Ocean Avenue and Seventh from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. I will appreciate any support you can give.

Thank you.

Your smiling mayor, Barney

Monterey Peninsula Choral Society Music of Christmas performances. Haymo Taeuber will conduct.

The popular event, which began as a single performance, has grown steadily to its threeday format and attracts listeners from throughout California. All three concerts are sold out this year, but for those who cannot be accommodated, the program will be broadcast on KWAV 96.9 FM at 8 p.m. Christmas day.

This is Taeuber's 12th year as music director of the Choral Society and the Monterey County Symphony.

The program will include Joseph Haydn's Theresa Mass with Monterey County Symphony Chamber Orchestra and soloists Caterina Micielli, soprano, Glenna De Weese, contralto, Stephen Janzen, tenor, and Thomas Hart, baritone.

Two works by Praetorium, Geborn ist uns Emmanuel and In dulci jubilo are followed by a group of traditional carols, Angels We Have Heard On High, Bring a Torch, Jeannette, Isabella, and Oh Come, All Ye Faithful. The Spanish carol, A La Nanita Nana and The Darkness Is Falling, an Austrian carol, both arranged by Haymo Taeuber, present chorus members Yolanda Mitchell and Dorothy Buffo as soloists.

Gustav Holst's choral fantasy on old carols, Christmas Day is sung by the chorus with the featured soloists, who will also perform selected solos from Saint-Saens Christmas Oratorio.

The traditional ending for the concert is Taeuber's arrangement of Silent Night.

The mission is on Rio Road at Lasuen Drive, Carmet. For more information about possible released tickets, phone 394-6351.

'Little Angel's Rest' on stage this weekend at Forest Theater

The Staff Players Repertory Company brings Christmas magic to Carmel's Indoor Forest Theater with Little Angels' Rest, a delightful Dickensian tale about runaway orphans, Friday through Sunday, Dec. 11-13.

The orphans seek refuge from the harsh life of a girls' orphanage. They go to a toy shop where dolls come to life and dreams come true.

Thomas R. Sanchez plays the wonderful toymaker, Cornelius Bittenburn, who endows his creations with more than meets the eye at first glance. They become animated with life itself.

Barbara Cabot is the cruel and shrewd Grammonika Gouge who runs the orphanage with an iron hand, often leaving the orphans to starvation and ill-health.

Nancy Bernhardt is Sully Orpslatt, the drunken cook, who menaces the orphans with threats. John Brady and Adam Lembeck play Councillor Upchurch and Mr. Hollowbody, the Chairman of the Board, who praise the fine work of Gramonika, letting the girls fend for themselves. Appearing as the two runaway girls are Susan Jeter and Megan Cabot as Gibbit and Spring Nichols, and Kara Pasierb as Lissie, the waif.

The Indoor Forest Theater is located at the corner of Santa Rita and Mountain View in Carmel. Curtain is at 8:30.

For reservations and further information, phone 624-1531.

THIS GELATIN SILVER print by Jerry N. Ulesmann is included in New Landscapes Part II, a show of contemporary landscape

'Ye Olde English Market-Faire' to feature crafts and entertainment

Ye Olde English Market-Faire, a crafts fair patterned after English marketplaces like Petticoat Lane, will become a tradition on the Monterey Peninsula Sunday, Dec. 14 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Like the Renaissance Pleasure Faire in Marin, Ye Olde English Market-Faire, with 200 exhibitors and entertainment, is the largest event of its kind ever to be held on the Monterey Peninsula. The market-faire will showcase the unique collective talents of the local craftspeople.

Renaissance music, songs and dancing will round out the show. Visitors may come as they are or wear a costume. The faire will be nke the markets Charles Dickens often frequented. Even the tickets for the event are hand-painted. They are $2, senior citizens will be admitted for half price, and children will be admitted free.

The booths will be covered with awnings in case of rain. Bargains will be found, as the craftspeople are not charged a percentage of their earnings and may then afford to ask lower prices.

Proceeds will benefit the Handicapped Society in Pacific Grove, UNICEF in Carmel, and the Monterey Cypress Empire.

The Monterey County Fairgrounds are at Fairgrounds and Garden roads, Monterey. For further information, phone 375-7165.

-Father Farrell's Wisdom

Our days on earth need not go unappreciated By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

An old Irishman, Shamus, was courting Bridget for

Finally she said, "Shamus don't you think it's time we got married?"

He replied, "Bridget, who would have us?" From time to time we all have the feeling of being ignored, that our work is not appreciated; that our love goes unrequited; our drudgery unnoticed, our sacrifices underestimated. On the other hand, nature tells us that the fig tree does not thank the earth for providing it with sustenance nor does the tree thank the sky for sunlight and rain. That's their job, just as it is our job to serve God, obey His laws and serve our neighbor above self. Just as the cow is made to graze, the plant to blossom, the cloud to produce rain, so are we meant to serve God and our fellow man.

That is the message that Rotary has been stressing in its motto for years. Service above self.

We might ask, "So what else is new?"

Amen

Monterey vintners produce 'some magnificent wines'

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

Franciscan priests planted the first vineyard in Monterey County at Soledad, but serious wine growing did not begin in this long green valley sloping to the Gavilan Mountain benchlands until the 1880s.

A Frenchman by the name of Tamm had recognized, in the geology of the area, a similarity to the prized soil of Burgundy and Champagne. In those angular convulsions of the earth, jutting above the red soil of the bleak area called the Chalone Bench, silhouettes now known as the Pinnacles National Monument, Tamm put down the first vines.

Mineralogist Will Silvear patiently tended the Tamm vineyards until 1919. But it was almost a half century until the dream of Monterey County as a prize vineyard land would begin — with the first plantings by the Mirassou family in 1961, followed closely by the Paul Masson Vineyard and the Wente Bros. in the Arroyo Seco region of this same Salinas

It took another 20 years of patience and study to realize the predictions of fine wines prophesied by Professor Albert Winkler of U.C.-Davis. Few realized the breadth of climate variations, the coldness of the northern reach, with the Monterey mistral blowing in from the bay, to the warmth of the southern region around King City.

THE WINE BOOM of the '70s saw thousands of acres being planted, both serious and speculative.

By 1979 the total was 31,632 bearing acres, considerably beyond Napa's 25,363.

But there were problems with the wines, dimly understood by even some of the best-trained enologists and viticulturists. Granted that in the northern vineyards of the county ripening would often extend into November and December, all too often the grapes would develop herbaceous and bell pepper tastes. Unkind critics referred to such red wine bouquet as the "veggies," finally emerging with the lump title of the "Monterey syndrome."

The bloom was off the rose. Like a witch's curse the regional stigma began to shadow Monterey County red wines. Quite independently, a French academy in Paris made studies to discover why some Bordeaux clarets in the cooler regions of the Gironde also developed bell pepper tastes and scents.

A molecular compound in such wines was isolated and identified as methoxy isobutylpyrazine, the same compound as found to be producing this aroma in bell peppers. And now, people in Monterey County wanted to find out if this curse of the Wicked Witch of the North could be made to sea breezes and inadequate rainfall, leaving man to develop sprinklers to green the fields, but that only seemed to complicate the problem.

MOTHER NATURE could be depended upon to unleash still a little later in Monterey, but nonetheless in full maturity.

Vineyards lush and green with great and generous canopies of beautiful foliage shaded gorgeous clusters of berries, both red and white, which made wine reeking of "the veggies."

The solution came — even as the diagnosis — from France, to a few grape-growers who had harkened to an old bit of Gallic wisdom stating: "To produce a great wine, the vine must suffer a little."

connoisseur

Former Washington state apple-grower turned Monterey wine grape-grower Doug Meador of Ventana Vineyards recounts his experience.

"You know all farmers like to see plants growing green, green, green. A little shriveling on the edge of the leaves, turning just a little yellow, and panic sets in. But we'd heard that French proverb, we'd slide up to Chalone and talk to Dick Graff, see his vines suffering, talk to Peter Mirassou and see him holding back the water from his vines, and then do the

"One day Andre Tchelistcheff visited us, walked the vineyard with me, looked at the vines, shook his head, and with his Slavic accent asked me, 'You've heard that French saying for the vines, Il faut suffrir? Well, these vines have really suffered — and that's good! If I though that I'd have to continue making Cabernet Sauvignon like some of my early attempts, I'd go back to being an apple-knocker tomorrow! But you know something? We've licked it!"

It remains true that each wine grape variety needs a different amount of moisture to gain an optimum vine vigor and leaf growth and fruit maturity. But with too much water, and the cool Monterey climate, the effort of the vine produces excess foliage instead of balancing the maturing fruit. Reducing the water stresses the vine, thereby causing the vine to put its effort for survival into the fruit, ripening the berries perhaps Unlocking the curse of the Monterey syndrome has required new looks at irrigation, pruning, stressing vines and a new kind of patience.

IT'S NOTHING SHORT of wonderful to be able to point to some magnificent Monterey County wines which are bringing the first dreams of greatness for the area into full realization.

Winkler's first optimistic estimates for the region are coming true.

Years ago, we tasted some of the Pinot Noir wines made by Ed Friedrich at Paul Masson Pinnacles Vineyards which were nothing short of regal. Now, from Jekel and Mirassou are Cabernet Sauvignon wines suggesting fine, big Bordeaux wines, almost chocolate-rich.

The Mirassou 1978 Chardonnay was luscious, buttery and magnificent. Wine lovers bought it up immediately; wise ones are still holding it in their cellars until it peaks in a year or two.

Space precludes listing a full harvest of the fine wines, but here are a few to prove the good news of the second century Monterey County wines:

• Ventana Vineyard 1979 Monterey County Pinot Blanc ($8). Golden wine, aged in French oak, marvelous, almost mysteriously rich with a long complexity. A wonderful aperitif.

• Chalone Vineyard 1979 Monterey County Pinot Blanc ($9.50). More redolent of French oak aging, deeper gold, bone dry, regal wine. A proud California wine of Burgundy breed.

• Jekel Vineyard 1979 Monterey County Pinot Blanc ($7). Estate-bottled, silky-smooth yet a little more austere, to accompany seafoods and shellfish, fragrant of French oak and the grape in balanced complexity.

• Jekel Vineyard 1979 Monterey County Johannisberg Riesling ($6). Delicate wine of an exquisite sugar-acid balance, rather like a fine Moselle.

• Wente Bros. 1979 Monterey County Johnannisberg Riesling ($4.30). Great value in this sweet-edged wine (1.2 percent residual sugar), making popular Sunday luncheon service at roast chicken time.

• J. Lohr 1979 Monterey Johannisberg Riesling-Late Harvest ($12). Golden wine of incredible complexity and finesse, with 9.9 percent residual sugar. For dessert service with melon, pear or mild cheese.

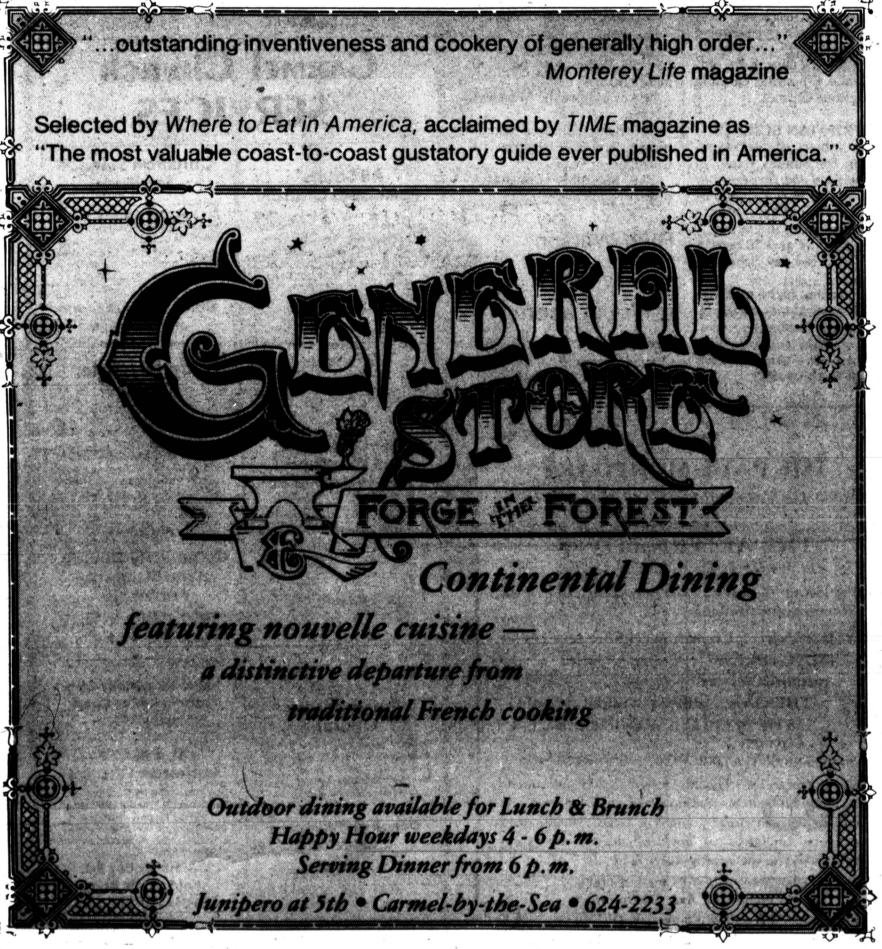

• Jekel Vineyard 1977 Monterey County Cabernet Sauvignon ($8.75). A highly complex Bordeaux-style wine of currant-chocolate richness, oak-aged, still a few years away from its peak, but a winner now.

• Mirassou 1977 Special Harvest Monterey County Cabernet Sauvignon ($8). The justifiable pride of the fifth generation members of the Mirassou family. Agriculturist Peter Mirassou brought in those grapes that produced this fullbodied, rich, deep, dark Cabernet, Bordeaux in style, which will take five to seven years to reach its velvet peak, but a wine to buy now, in current release.

From white to red, from bone dry to luxurious richness, all those wines are victorious symbols of the second century for Monterey County.

It took 2,000 years for European vineyards to reach their present status of excellence.

Catching up in an accelerated decade of the '70s earns great plaudits for those wine growers of California.

'East of Eden' documentary takes viewer behind the scenes

Local pride will prevail when KMST-TV and the Monterey Federal Credit Union take everyone behind the scenes of the actual filming of an ABC miniseries based on John Steinbeck's epic novel, East of Eden.

The program features the talents of actors Timothy and Sam Bottoms, now local residents. A large part of the movie was filmed right here in Steinbeck Country.

This unique 30-minute television program special will be on the air Sunday, Dec. 14 from 6:30-7 p.m. on Channel 46.

On Location: East of Eden is produced and narrated by KMST/46 Public Affairs Director Kathryn Pratt and directed by Pacific Grove filmmaker Steven Rosen.

The actual ABC miniseries will be screened in February of 1981.

Many contribute to Christmastime joy in Carmel

By RICHARD TYLER

"IT'S A TIME to be giving; it's a time to be glad."

The third annual Christmas in Carmel Celebration which took place Saturday, Dec. 6, at Sunset Center continues to grow with enriched community spirit. A celebration can have many meanings. It is an observance, a ritual, a remembrance, a commemoration, a consecration, a dedication. Or in a larger sense, a holiday, a religious feast day, an event, an occasion, a red letter day, a jubilee, a festival, a party, a happening. It can also be a wing-ding or a bash, a revelry, or a wassail.

But I think that a major part of this commitment is the possibility for the community to participate and give back to its own neighborhood a small part of what each of us gains by living in such an environment and among such neighbors.

We often forget the gift of giving through the year, but we are given an opportunity to show our joy and appreciation for the gifts that we have received throughout the year at such a Christmas in Carmel is made a more festive occasion by the contribution of many.

To mention a few: members of the choirs of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Carmel Mission Basilica, Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, Carmel Presbyterian Church, Church of the Wayfarer and St. Dunstan's Church join to raise their voices in the glorious music of the season. The Christmas tree is presented by the Kiwanis Club and decorated by the Girl Scout troops 2009 and 2069 and Brownies 2121. It is protected by Boy Scouts of Troop 3. The theater is decorated by the students of the Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula, Middle School and Tularcitos School. The music sung by the combined choir is paid for by the Rotary Club, and the candy which is passed out by our perennial Santa Claus, Dick Lewitzke, is offered through the good graces of the Host Lions Club of Carmel. Crocker National Bank and Northern California Savings and Loan have helped offset additional costs.

A very special accolade must be given to the untiring efforts of Ann Welchner, who has been a leading force in this activity since its onset. Her associates in making such beautiful music were Robert Klevan of Robert Louis Stevenson School and Bill Zeitler at the piano which the Monterey County Symphony Association donated for the occasion.

Tubas reverberated at Mission

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

A STRANGE WHIRRING NOISE was faintly heard Sunday afternoon in the Carmel Mission Basilica.

It did not seem part of the tuba convocation that was going on there. It was different from the beating acoustic phenomenon of many bass instruments all striking (or attempting to strike) the same note. It was not the same as the glorious out-of-tune display of the "Tuesday" brass ensemble from Monterey Peninsula College.

The whirring sound was not of this world. One might wonder, superstitiously of course, at the wisdom of causing 30 tubas to sound at one time in the venerable and far-fromearthquake-proof Carmel Mission. One might even wonder at the wisdom of causing 30 tubas to sound at one time anywhere.

But such questions have a predictable response when put to a tuba player. In the concert world there can perhaps be no one lonelier than a tubist. The title alone sounds like a cross between a sausage maker and a plumber. And the greatest of composers have only demonstrated insensitive exploitation of this orchestral Sampson cum Prometheus.

Paul Hindemith was temperamentally bound to acknowledge the instrument; John Philip Sousa gave it a new shape. But Ralph Vaughan Williams, who wrote an F Minor concerto for it, makes it more redundant with the title "bass tuba."

The tuba does enjoy the divided grandeur of doubling the great Wagner theme in Die Meistersinger. But to this day the most sensitive, plaintive and idiomatic melody ever conceived for the instrument is the lament of Tubby the Tuba.

But, like dirty old men, tubists need love, too. And last Sunday at the sanctified Carmel Mission Basilica they were loved. They were loved by Hank Smith of Monterey Peninsula College, the coordinator for the event; by about 200 people in attendance ("beautiful" someone shouted after one especially successful number), and they were loved by themselves.

TIM RAGAN opened the afternoon with the MPC Tuesday Brass Ensemble.

Though the reverberating overtones of the low instruments made it difficult to pin down accurate intonation, most in the audience could not help but recognize that the tuning-up process was less than successful. The resultant anxieties were fully realized with a polytonality that was foreign to the renaissance madrigals arranged by Irving Rosenthal. The effect was less conspicuous, and less in evidence, in the contemporary Folksong Suite No. 2 by William Schmidt.

The MPC Tuba Sextet (plus one) then played a processional called Santa Rosalia by Frank Lucido.

Maestro Frank drew it from his fairly recent opera, La Chiave (which had its world-premiere in Monterey about three years ago), and the arrangement, while recognizable, was lugubrious in the extreme.

A short suite, Piece for Six Tubas, by Bill Svarda followed. In less than 10 minutes it growled and snapped and crooned. But that piece, like several others on the program, was swallowed in its own profundity.

The fatal lesson was continued by the 30 tubas in their opening number, the motet Christe, lux vera by Pierluigi of Palestrina. It may have delighted the players, but the literal transposition into the cellar required the audience to perceive stratifications normally reserved for the deceased.

Fortunately, the next arrangement, Arcadelt's Ave Maria adapted by James Self, was as deep and as bright as a Gabrieli canzon. In fact it was the highlight of the afternoon. Unlike its fellows on the program, it had a sturdy display of dynamics.

and a true grandeur burnished its otherwise woolly flood. Another Self arrangement fared less well, as did Paul Schauvin's convoluted and willful arrangement of America. Tidy and unsurprising arrangements of Joy to the World and Silent Night concluded the 45-minute program. In response to a question, Smith suggested that such a gathering might become an annual event, in October, under the eternal title of you guessed it — Octubafest.

Thanks go to tubists from Sacramento, Concord, San Francisco, San Jese, Oklahoma, Berkeley, Hollister, Palo Alto, San Bruno, San Mateo, Moraga and many cities in Monterey County. The strange whirring noise was traced to the sepulchre of Father Junipero Serra, whose mortal remains were apparently set to spinning by the subterranean vibrations of the tuba orchestra.

Truly it was a low blow.

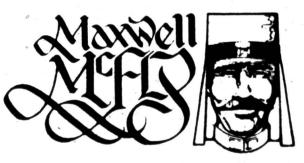

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM 97.

Valley poet awarded third prize

Hascal Stewart of Carmel Valley Manor won third prize for After the Melting of the Snow in the category of poems of 12 lines or fewer in the 1980 poetry contest of the Ina Coolbrith Circle.

She has lived in Carmel Valley Manor for four years, in this area for nearly forty, and has been a member of the Ina Coolbrith Circle poetry society since 1960.

She plays the piano, loves music, and in 1968, she set to music the sonnet Easter Weather, written by her friend Dora Hagemeyer, the poet. Some of her compositions, especially songs, have been performed by Jean Canada and the late Fred Schaad.

An evening of poems and music, featuring poetry by Margaret Atwood, will be held Saturday evening, Dec. 13, at the Cherry Foundation Hall, Guadalupe and Fourth Street in Carmel.

sunlight . . .

Ms. Atwood's work, The Journals of Susanna Moodie, has been arranged for voice and cello by Dan Gotch, fusing music and poetry into an effective theatrical event. Musical themes ranging from Bach to familiar folksong melodies are used to enrich and restate the poetry.

The poems will be read by Deirdre Moore, and the cello will be played by Hannah Brickman. Ms. Brickman will also play Bach's Suite No. 5 for unaccompanied cello.

- The evening is sponsored by the Poetic Drama Institute, a Cherry Foundation Theatre Project.

The program begins at 8 p.m. and all are welcome. A donation of $3 is asked. For information and reservations, call 624-7491.

Is A Problem Drinker

Hurting You?

Read Every Word

If a problem drinker is hurting you, you can be sure he's hurting himself too - or herself. Alcoholism does not respect sex, age or color. How long can you go on? If you're ready to do something about it, remember this ... you can help the alcoholic even if he or she doesn't want help.

What Not to Do

Don't accuse – he or she will never admit to drinking too much. Don't try to reason with the problem drinker. Alcohol

abusers are seriously ill, and the illness affects the mind

The best thing (and really the only thing) you can do for problem drinkers is to get them to professional help. Fast. The CareUnit Program in your local hospital offers a unique program that works. Given the right environment and an effective treatment program, alcoholism is a treatable disease. We prove it every day. In a few weeks, the problem drinker can look forward to resuming a useful and productive place in society. And you can look forward to a

Begin by calling your local CareUnit immediately, and talk to a staff counselor. You alone can help the alcoholic. Call now and make an appointment to see a counselor. You

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is happy to be here and we always look forward to meeting our subscribers. As a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a FREE WANT AD every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by 3 p.m. Monday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 16 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse any free ad for any reason. Free ads must be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales

Adventure in Living on Alta Mesa Road

Alta Mesa Road may be one of the best kept secrets in Monterey. It's less than a mile from downtown, a short street with large houses and expansive grounds, yet many people have never been there.

The spacious family home at No. 1171 flourishes in this privacy. Frontage on the street is 95 feet, the house is set well back at the end of a curving drive, and the area at the rear provides the kind of seclusion every family would like to have: broad, comfortable decks, hot tub, lush lawns, trees and a garden house.

The deeply recessed entrance is nearly hidden by planting. Inside is a tile-floored entrance hall, lit by spotlights. Move right and you're in the vaulted living room — natural redwood walls, grey beams, upswept brick fireplace, wide windows and sliding doors opening to the deck and back garden.

Circle on about and you come to the dining room: same rising beams, white walls, a corner of the fireplace and view of the garden. A small door brings you into a short lanai with pictures on one side and windows on the other, leading to the 19 × 19 family room. This is wonderfully bright with two walls of glass, all manner of closets and cabinets, a free-standing Swedish fireplace, small bar, decks and hot tub just outside.

Cross the deck or go back through the lanai and you reach the bedroom wing. Two sunny chambers face the rear garden, their bath across the hall. The master bedroom is at the end and faces the front. Its bath is imaginatively angled, like a Escher drawing, with step-in tub and shower, skylights and mirrors.

The kitchen is between the dining room and a sizeable laundry room which, in turn, opens to the big double garage. The kitchen is nicely papered, lined with maple cabinets, a glass block window above the range, open windows over sink and breakfast bar.

The house is full of surprise angles, rooms and spaces you don't expect. Examples: a small, brick-walled den off the living room; a private play yard just outside the kitchen. It's a mature home, well seasoned, well lived in, immaculate. And only your friends know how to get there! It's $369,500.

A PEBBLE'S THROW

IN THE HEART of the BEST location of Pebble Beach . . . and within a pebble's throw of the Lodge ... a lovely home with French country-style touches on eight-tenths of an acre of landscaped grounds. There are three bedrooms and three baths, including a luxurious master suite with fireplace, "his" and "her" bath, and private garden. Other features are a spacious living room with vaulted beamed ceiling, pegged oak floor, fireplace with built-in barbecue, enclosed wet bar, cozy dining room overlooking the garden, a study, convenient kitchen with top-grade appliances, breakfast area and loads of storage, and laundry room. It's not often that a home of this kind comes on the market so close to the Lodge and its shops, and we suggest an early appointment. $690,000.

PACIFIC GROVE— $84,950 and $99,500 TAKE YOUR PICK!

TWO DELIGHTFUL HOMES, and both at an affordable price . . . and both with owner financing. One is a cottage only half a block from Lighthouse Avenue, with two bedrooms, one bath, living room with fireplace, separate dining room, and kitchen with breakfast area. First assumable at 93/4% and owner will carry a large second. $84,950. The other home, close to town and close to the water, is a cute two-bedroom, one-bath home, kitchen with dining area, laundry room, and single-car garage. It's fully fenced, too. Owner financing available. $99,500. Both homes are easily shown, so call us today!

Pebble Beach

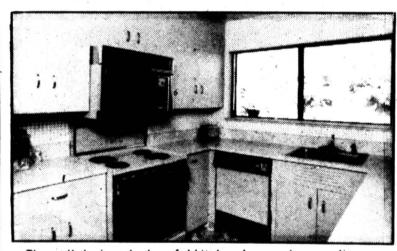

Conveniently close to The Lodge at Pebble Beach, a driveway curves past pines and oaks to an almost-acre site to reach this contemporary, redwood home and a parking court off which are a guest house and double garage with Genie door control, and, in both the residence and guest house, all rooms but one open either to the tiled front terrace, a walled deck or two sunny patios, one with a fireplace.

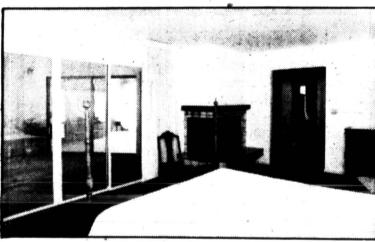

In the long living room centered by a handsome fireplace, are bookcases, floor-to-ceiling windows framing the terrace and a door to the parquet-floored den with a wet bar.

A crystal chandelier, also cabinets with cupboards, drawers and glassed shelves, enhance the dining room opening through a window wall to the patio which has a fireplace.

The well-designed, cheerful kitchen has modern appliances including a compactor and microwave oven, ample cabinets and access to the garage across the sheltered side patio.

A fireplace and glass doors to the walled deck are in the bedroom of the master suite which includes, too, a large, compartmented bath/dressing area and a study. Also in the 2,300 sq. ft. main residence are a second bedroom and bath suite opening to the side patio. The guest house has two rooms and a bath, also access to both the fireplace patio and the parking court. Price of this property planned for the enjoyment of life, indoors and outdoors, is $445,000.
